

Plan for low, moderate-income housing, suburbs urged

by KAREN BLECHA
The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said.

"This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's, but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

U.S. subpoenas village records for past 5 years

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Board records for the past five years have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged building and zoning shakedowns in that village yesterday.

A Herald reporter was present Friday when a federal agent arrived at the Wheeling Village Hall to serve the subpoena on Village Mgr. George Passolt.

It was learned yesterday that the document served on the village manager was a subpoena for board records. Passolt refused to comment, noting that grand jury proceedings are secret.

Other village officials contacted yesterday also declined to comment on the subpoena or even confirm that board records had been subpoenaed. "If there's any announcement of that magnitude, I think it should come from the village manager," said Trustee John Koopen.

Only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said specifically that he knew nothing about the subpoenaed records. He said he knew village building and zoning records had been subpoenaed earlier this year, but said he had not been informed of the new subpoena.

Likewise, federal officials connected with the investigation said they could make no comment on the matter.

THE VILLAGE BOARD records are the latest documents to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury. Early this summer, several cartons of village building and zoning records were turned over to the grand jury, which has been hearing testimony for several months.

The investigation by U.S. Atty. James Thompson's office is focused on reports of payoffs by developers to obtain village approval of such things as annexation, zoning, subdivision plans and water and sewer lines.

Targets of the federal grand jury probe include certain present or former village officials as well as others suspected of violating the Hobbs Act by using extortion and bribery to interfere with interstate commerce.

The Wheeling case is also expected to make use of a large number of witnesses, many of them developers of major Wheeling projects built in the past five years. Some of these developers, subpoenaed by the grand jury, have been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

ONE SOURCE close to the grand jury proceedings indicated to the Herald yesterday that at least one aspect of the federal inquiry is the manner in which elections are conducted. Witnesses before the grand jury were asked how elections are run in Wheeling, how candidates are selected and what causes individuals to either seek public office or, once elected, to remain in public office.

Although government inquiry into election procedures in Wheeling was not considered the purpose of the original investigation, illegal election practices would be legitimate grounds for federal agents to pursue. Violations of election law could also violate federal statutes.

IRVING FEDERAL SAVINGS and Loan Association of Chicago will open a branch office in Buffalo Grove later this month. Located in the Ranch Mart

Shopping Center at Buffalo Grove and Dundee roads, it will be the first savings and loan to serve Buffalo Grove and the surrounding area. Irving Federal Savings has been at its present address on the northwest side of Chicago since 1913.

Police alarm board with new company

Firms quit burglar alarm system

by LYNN ASINOF

In a minor revolt, about 30 Wheeling businesses have withdrawn from the burglar alarm system at the police station and tied in to an alarm board with an answering service sponsored by Certified Burglar Alarm Systems, Inc.

This action is the latest in an ongoing controversy that developed when Police Chief Peter Guttila decided to switch the police alarm board from Certified to Burns Electronic Security Services, Inc. According to Guttila, the switchover was ordered because he thought Burns was a better security firm than Certified. "Burns is a big, worldwide organization," he said earlier this summer. "Certified is, from what I understand, a local burglar alarm system. My goal is to upgrade the security of the businesses that are hooked up to this system."

Local businessmen, however, apparently did not agree with Guttila. Although the chief has repeatedly assured the businessmen that the switchover would not mean higher burglar alarm fees, they cited this as a major reason in withdrawing from the police board.

The maintenance engineer at one local firm cited a letter from Certified that stated that burglar alarm service fees would increase because of the new Burns board.

"SOMEONE'S going to have to pay for the new Burns' equipment," he said. "Mine is still hooked in at the police department, but I'm still not allowing any increases on it. What we're doing right now is just sitting down and waiting."

The maintenance engineer said other firms that withdrew from the police alarm board "just transferred over to the answering service for a while to see what's going to happen."

Lt. Ron Nelson said the information about higher alarm service fees was generated by Certified in an effort to keep their alarm board in the police department. As a result, he said the police have received many calls from irate businessmen about the alarm board change.

"They accused us of all kinds of wrongdoing on this," he said. "But it's not a matter that it's costing them any more money. There was no change in the stores. Essentially the board we have installed here is identical to the one Certified had."

Nelson said, however, that the new alarm system puts an additional step in the alarm protection system. "The old procedure is that the alarm would go off here in the station," he said. "Now the alarm rings at the answering service, then they call us. It really doesn't take that much away from our operation other than before it came direct."

The new answering service alarm system also does not tell the police what the alarm is for. Nelson said the police board has different lights for burglaries, hold-ups and line trouble. "Now they just tell us we have an alarm, but we don't know which kind," he said.

Nelson said about 30 of the 70 businesses hooked up at the police station withdrew about three weeks ago when the answering service alarm board went into operation.

Officials at Certified and Burns were unavailable for comment yesterday.

Dodo's Dogs goes up before zone board

The Wheeling Zoning Board tonight will consider a request for a special use permit for Dodo's Dogs, Inc., a hot dog stand proposed for 636 N. Milwaukee Ave.

Major remodeling of the building is substantially underway, although tonight's hearing will be the first official village action on the project. A special use permit is required for all restaurant operations in the village.

The hot dog stand is being developed by former trustee Michael Valenza and Vern Nystrom, chairman of the village's police and fire commission.

Valenza and Nystrom have informed the village building department that if the special use permit is not granted, the building will be used for retail sales allowed under their present business zoning.

Building Director Bill Bleber said that since no mention was made of a restaurant on the building permit application, he was forced to grant a permit for the remodeling. He said that if the building had been described as a hotdog stand, he could not have issued a building permit until the special use permit was issued.

THE ZONING board will also consider a request for a zoning change that would allow a car wash to be built on the north side of Dundee Road, west of the Wheeling Drainage Ditch.

In another hearing, the zoning board members will review the current zoning ordinance that governs the density of living units in the flood plain. A revision of the ordinance was suggested by the plan commission because of serious planning problems associated with Swan Lake, a 624-unit apartment project proposed for southern Wheeling.

Although nearly half of the Swan Lake property is in the flood plain and thus unsuitable for building, developers used the entire acreage of the site in computing the number of apartments allowed by ordinance. The zoning board is expected to recommend that the density allowed by ordinance be modified by the amount of land in the flood plain.

The zoning board is scheduled to consider a request for a sign variation for the Dairy Queen at Dundee and Elmhurst roads. A review of the definition of banks in the zoning ordinance is also scheduled.

The hearings will begin at 7 at the village hall, 255 W. Dundee Road.

High Court rules against parochial aid

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $5 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1960 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Housing plan likely to face stern test

by KAREN BLECHA

The test of the Regional Housing Coalition's plan will come when low-income housing leaves the talking stage and becomes concrete proposals for specific locations.

Reaction to a similar plan in the Dayton, Ohio, area, according to one official there, was mixed at first but the real opposition didn't come till later.

"Some areas were quite warm and receptive and in other areas people screamed and called us socialists and communists," said Anne Shafer, deputy housing director of the Miami Valley Regional Planning Commission (MVRPC). "But the real protests came when specific projects were introduced on a local level by developers," said Mrs. Shafer.

The Chicago-area housing coalition may be in for a fight. If Dayton's housing plan is any indication, some communities will refuse to allow the housing, and progress in other towns will be slow.

Mayors and officials who designed the Regional Housing Coalition plan are not naive. They admit the issue of federally subsidized housing for families with below-average income has always been controversial in the white, middle-class suburbs. They also realize the plan is voluntary, with guidelines that cannot be enforced.

"We're not telling anybody what they have to do," said Jack Pahl, who formed the housing coalition two years ago. "We're depending on local leadership and local responsibility to meet a regional need."

When the Dayton area's plan was announced in the summer of 1970, the MVRPC painstakingly explained its goal: to give low- and moderate-income families a choice of where to live.

SUCH HOUSING was concentrated in the city of Dayton, and planners wanted to disperse new projects in a five-county area around the city. The five counties include metropolitan areas, suburbs and rural communities.

The protests came from a variety of communities — white collar and blue-collar, upper-middle and middle-class. Much of the protest stemmed from a fear that property values would be reduced by low- and moderate-income housing projects; other protest revolved around racial issues.

One of the worst fights, according to Mrs. Shafer, was in a white middle-class suburb that considers itself rural and wanted to stay that way. Another was in a working class suburb which survives economically because of a large Frigidaire plant within its city limits.

"Some towns have succeeded in keeping out the housing," Mrs. Shafer said. "They refused approval on some technicality on the site plan or plat. The developers gave up."

One developer didn't give up and took his case against Centerville, an established, high-income suburb, to court. The developer had obtained approval to build, but when local officials found out it was to be federally subsidized for moderate-income residents, they refused to deliver the building permit. The court nurses and elementary school teachers. The plan defines low-income as a family of four living on $6,000 a year and moderate-income for the same family living on $9,000 a year.

Roughly 80 per cent of the housing most workers can still afford is still in the city," Pahl said. For example, according to Stan Kyber of the Elk Grove Village Association of Commerce and Industry, 80 per cent of the 27,000 employees in Centex Industrial Park do not live in Elk Grove Village. Centex is the largest industrial park in the Northwest sector.

The housing coalition emphasized the need for communities to respond immediately to what it describes as a housing "crisis."

"Immediate response is imperative," said Frederick G. Jaacks, chairman of Inland Steel and spokesman for the coalition. "Unless communities develop adequate housing plans, the federal government will have to develop them."

Members of the mayor's coalition will start a series of meetings in their sectors to talk with local officials about the plan and housing needs. Teichert admitted that some mayors would think it is political suicide to endorse the plan because low and moderate-income housing is such a controversial issue. But he thinks they will change their minds.

"I THINK and hope my reelection will show them that this is just a boogie man in their minds," Teichert said. He also said there is a possibility that communities would clamor to get low-income housing for the elderly to avoid such housing for families. "It will take an educational program to change that, but I can tell you that some mayors' feelings have changed just over the past year," he said.

Pahl said that residents may protest the plan for racial reasons, but he said he hoped an educational program would change that.

The current moratorium on federal housing subsidies is not expected to affect the plan, Pahl said. "While the specific nature of the future programs is still being considered by Congress, we are confident there will continue to be governmental programs to meet the national goal of a decent home and suitable environment for every American family."

The coalition has asked to meet with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development to discuss the plan, but no date has been set.

ruled in the developer's favor.

"Since the Centerville situation, no other community has let it go that far," Mrs. Shafer said.

She said once developments were built and the people moved in, there have been no clashes. Some of the new residents try to get involved in their community. Others stay isolated like an island.

The MVRPC, like the Regional Housing Coalition, has no legal power to force communities to accept low and moderate-income housing. But Mrs. Shafer said the Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which supplies federal funds to towns for a variety of projects, has been helpful.

"SOME COMMUNITIES were put on the bottom of funding lists for park grants and such because they would not cooperate with the housing plan," she said. MVRPC also carries some weight over site and design of projects because it has the power to review applications for housing grants before making a recommendation to HUD.

The Dayton plan was not designed to promote integration, although many residents thought so. Some developments are all-white, some all-black and others racially mixed.

There are blacks she said who do not want to move out of city neighborhoods for better housing because they think the black community is more politically powerful when it stays together. "But they agree that they should have the opportunity to move if they want to," she said.

Progress has been slow and HUD's moratorium on federal housing money since January hasn't helped any. In 1970, MVRPC said that 14,125 housing units were needed for low and moderate-income families. Since then 4,300 have been built and 2,500 more units are in the works.

There has been some progress geographically. While low and moderate-income housing is still concentrated in Dayton, developments have been built in four of the five counties in 18 areas. In 1970, the housing was in only one county and three areas.

The housing has been both public and private, built by a private developer who is federally-subsidized.

Most of the housing has been moderate-income and planners intend to concentrate now on low-income units. "We're also going to aim for mutual acceptance to achieve a level of understanding on the part of officials and citizens so they don't think it is the end of the world," said Mrs. Shafer. "I think our plan has been moderately successful. After all, things like this don't happen overnight."

Point-of-View

The Golden Rule as a Business Motivator

Would you believe that this statement would be on the front page of a leading business publication. "At a time when profit margins are scraping along at the lowest levels of the post World War II era, the executive suite proclaims that PROFITS ARE NO LONGER THE PRIMARY CORPORATE GOAL."

What do you think is rapidly becoming first? Social responsibility, that's what!

I'm glad to see that because all my business life I have earnestly believed and practiced the concept that if I thought big enough to serve people first money would take care of itself.

Modern business thinking has been swinging around very solidly to the Golden Rule concept. Witness this statement from Principles of Management by Koontz and O'Donnell, a widely used McGraw-Hill college level textbook. "Perhaps the very best guideline for a sound motivational system is the biblical admonishment to do unto others as you would have them do to you. If this rule were truly followed any system of eliciting effort would be headed in the right direction."

And this statement, same textbook. "It is a premise of great importance that no firm will exist in the long run unless it contributes positively to the general welfare."

And this one. "The objectives of Ladendorff's must be chosen with a view to their contribution to social needs; the decisions must square with the ethics of society."

I couldn't agree with anything more than those statements. The auto business has its critics, and much of what they demand be changed needs to be changed. But, I think, this is only to say that the quality of every facet of our way of life is being re-examined. I am sure that the auto business in particular is swiftly adjusting to satisfy your product and service needs. Finally, I believe much of what we value today in this nation has partly evolved because of the wisdom, vision and leadership of tall men in the auto business. Being human, they have often erred. Being human, they have often repented and changed. Many have been and are "Golden Rule" motivated.

I count myself strongly on the side of those who genuinely desire to help you as you would want to be helped. That's the "Golden Rule." I live it and eat it and sleep it and have for a long time. I certainly am glad to see it being taught today as the corner-stone of successful enterprise and intrapersonal relationships.

In Moscow, the Soviets congratulated the Chinese on the 24th anniversary of the People's Republic, but accused Mao Tse-Tung of betraying the Chinese revolution.

David Bruce, chief of the United States Liaison Office in Peking, was invited to the National Day banquet, the first ever attended by an American government official.

Bruce was the sole Western diplomat mentioned in the name list broadcast by the Official New China News Agency (NCNA), although scores of others were present.

With a new party congress just completed and a new leadership lineup, the joint editorial said the main emphasis now must be on carrying out the party's political line of moderation.

Big defense bill survives Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Senate overwhelmingly passed a $21 billion defense weapons procurement bill Monday after defeating 10 separate liberal efforts to cut it.

The 91-7 Senate vote was a victory for the administration, which had argued strenuously against any cuts in spending for weapons. The House version of the bill was $20.4 billion.

The final vote followed defeat of an amendment calling for a $500 million across-the-board cut in the bill — the 10th and final effort by liberals to reduce weapons expenditures.

Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., who originally proposed a $750 million across-the-board cut, led the fight for the amendment.

Humphrey called for "fiscal responsibility," a favorite conservative rallying cry. "Fiscal responsibility," he shouted across the Senate floor. "I hear that time and again. Let's have some of it."

The closest the liberals ever came to cutting the bill was a 49-47 vote last week against a proposal to delay the Navy's new Trident missile submarine. The $500 million cut was the only amendment offered Monday.

Humphrey had proposed a $750 million cut, but Sen. Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., proposed reducing that to $500 million.

Earlier this year, the House approved an overall $900 million cut in the weapons bill after defeating numerous efforts to strike specific weapons. At that time, it appeared that the generally more liberal Senate would follow the same course.

The administration requested $22 billion for weapons this year and the Senate Armed Services Committee cut that back to $20.5 billion.

Nine attempts on the Senate floor in the past week and a half failed to reduce that further. In fact, the Senate has added $500 million more for the Navy's F14 Tomcat fighter and approved a new pension plan for retired military men that could eventually cost $16 billion.

Sirica will cut bugging sentences

WASHINGTON (UPI) — U.S. District Court Judge John J. Sirica said Monday he would reduce the provisional maximum sentences imposed on five members of the Watergate bugging team because forcing them to serve the full period "would not only be unwarranted but unjust."

Their attorneys, however, indicated to reporters later they would press ahead with motions to change their original pleas of guilty to innocent.

Appearing before Sirica in the hearing on sentence reduction were E. Howard Hunt Jr., former White House aide and one of masterminds of the bugging of Democratic National headquarters in the Watergate in May and June, 1972; and four men who actually entered the offices, Bernard L. Barker, the foreman, Frank A. Sturgis, Eugenio R. Martinez, the photographer, and Virgilio R. Gonzales.

In a prepared statement, Sirica said he was disturbed over "widespread misunderstanding" about their sentences that he imposed in March after their trial.

"It was never my intention, and again I repeat with emphasis, that the maximum terms of the provisional sentences should become the terms of the final sentences," Sirica said.

Sirica said he had planned to dispose of the sentences last week but all five men filed motions to change their pleas on grounds they were led to believe they were acting in the national interest.

Hunt was given a maximum 35-year sentence; the others 40 each.

When Sirica originally sentenced the men, he stressed that the final sentences would depend on the cooperation they gave to Watergate investigators.

Sirica also dealt with another man expected to cooperate in the Watergate probe, granting limited immunity to Donald H. Segretti for testimony before the Senate Watergate committee tomorrow and later before a grand jury.

Sirica acted shortly after Segretti — saying "I certainly regret my involvement" — pleaded guilty to three counts of conspiracy and distribution of illegal political literature on behalf of President Nixon's re-election campaign.

Segretti, 31, the Cambridge-educated lawyer who was recruited for campaign "dirty tricks" by his old college friend, former presidential appointments secretary Dwight Chapin, offered his plea before U.S. District Court Judge Gerhard A. Gesell.

Gesell delayed sentencing Segretti pending a probationary investigation he said would take 45 to 60 days. The counts, each one a misdemeanor, carry a maximum penalty of $3,000 and three years in prison.

A fourth count against Segretti, involving an unspecified letter about Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, was dropped by special prosecutor Archibald Cox.

Petersen defended in 'leaks' charge

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The White House said Monday it has received assurances that Assistant Attorney General Henry E. Petersen was not the source of news leaks about grand jury evidence allegedly linking Vice President Spiro T. Agnew to a Maryland political kickback scheme.

Agnew Saturday accused Petersen of conducting an "unprofessional and malicious and outrageous" investigation. He referred specifically to a CBS news report quoting Petersen as saying: "We've got the evidence. We've got it cold."

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L.

Warren told reporters the White House was assured by Attorney General Elliot L. Richardson by telephone Monday morning that Petersen never talked to anyone in the news media about the Agnew case.

Warren also said White House counsel J. Fred Buzhardt earlier acted as a "go-between" in negotiations between Agnew's attorneys and the Justice Department. But he refused to confirm or deny reports that Buzhardt suggested Agnew resign and plead guilty to a lesser offense than the evidence might warrant.

Agnew's attorneys have asked a federal court to halt a Baltimore grand jury investigation of allegations that he accepted kickbacks from Maryland contractors during the 1960s when he was a Baltimore county official and later governor. The argued that an incumbent vice president cannot be indicted and that Agnew's rights were violated by news leaks.

Government attorneys disclosed Monday they will file briefs Oct. 8 and 11 responding to Agnew's suit. U.S. District Judge Walter E. Hoffman scheduled a hearing Oct. 12 to hear arguments on that suit, which is expected to wind up in the Supreme Court.

New look at Bell rate hike

SPRINGFIELD ILL. (UPI) — The Illinois Supreme Court has ordered the Illinois Commerce Commission to take another look at a $44.5 million rate increase granted to the Illinois Bell Telephone Co.

The justices also ruled that the Commerce Commission does not at the present time have the right to regulate the cable television industry in the state.

The court ordered a new hearing on the Bell rate increase because, it said, the commission improperly allowed Bell to include certain operating expenses in calculations requesting higher rates.

Among the expenses the court said were improperly included were: Bell's legislative lobbying expenses; charitable contributions valued during 1971 at $1.1 million; dues of Bell executives to civic, social and athletic clubs; and a portion of the annual license fee which Illinois Bell pays to its parent firm, American Telephone and Telegraph Co.

The justices said inclusion of those expenses in hearing testimony may have influenced the ICC decisions on the 1971 rate request.

Bell originally asked for a rate increase which would have provided $182 million in new revenue. The ICC granted only the $44.5 million and the firm appealed the decision in Kane County Circuit Court. The lower court upheld the commission action.

The order for a new hearing likely means the increase will be cut still further.

In another case, the court ruled that cable television operations are not included under the legal definition of the term "public utility," and, therefore, are not subject to Illinois Commerce Commission regulation.

The decision means, the court said, that the legislature will have to redefine terms in the public utilities act if it wishes to have the ICC regulate cable television.

In other action, the court:

• Invalidated a 1968 law designed to prevent "panic peddling" of real estate in racially changing neighborhoods.

• Ruled that the state may not destroy allegedly obscene materials unless their owner is successfully prosecuted under the state obscenity statute.

Name civilian prime minister in Greece

ATHENS (UPI) — President George Papadopoulos Monday announced the resignation of his military cabinet and the appointment of the first civilian prime minister to head Greece's post-republican government.

Papadopoulos named historian-politician Spyros Markezinis as prime minister of the republic he declared last June and asked him to report back with a new cabinet by Saturday, when the present all-military government will resign.

Supporters and opponents of the present military regime, however, have criticized Markezinis' appointment. Three top cabinet members, all former military officers, have already resigned. Critics say Markezinis will be "prime minister only in name."

In Vatican City, Pope Paul VI received deposed King Constantine of Greece and his wife Queen Anne Marie in a "farewell meeting" before the couple leave for exile in London, the Vatican announced.

Political sources said Papadopoulos had ceded some of his exclusive control over foreign affairs, public order and national defense to Markezinis but would still remain in overall charge of government as chief executive.

When Papadopoulos abolished the Greek monarchy in favor of a republic with himself as president last June, he pledged formation of the new government to prepare the country for a return to parliamentary rule sometime next year. Papadopoulos and Markezinis reaffirmed that pledge in an exchange of letters Monday, political sources said.

Political sources said Markezinis' appointment was greeted with some disfavor on the part of Papadopoulos' former army colleagues. Second deputy premier Nicholas Makarezos and two deputy ministers, all members of the junta that carried out the April, 1967, military takeover, resigned last week.

Franco: 37 years in power

MADRID (UPI)—Spain, in ceremonies reminiscent to that of a monarch, Monday celebrated the 37th anniversary of the inauguration of Generalissimo Francisco Franco as chief of state with church and civil ceremonies.

Wearing the gala uniform of a captain-general of the armed forces, the 60-year-old leader received the compliments of government, church and diplomatic officials in a ceremony at the Palacio de Oriente, Madrid's vacated royal palace.

With 37 years in office, Franco is the dean of Europe's heads of state. Constantly moving at Franco's right was Juan Carlos, the 35-year-old bourbon prince whom Franco picked as his successor and future king of Spain three years ago.

The ceremonies commemorated the proclamation of Franco as chief of state on Oct. 1, 1936 in Burgos, then the capital of the nationalist held territory in the Spanish civil war.

Last June, he took a first step toward retirement when he gave up the post of Prime Minister and appointed Admiral Luis Carrero Blanco to the job. But Franco retained his functions as chief of state, commander in chief of the armed forces and leader of the "National Movement," Spain's only political party.

Oakton College claims to improve education by bucking the system

by KATHERINE BOYCE

Professors at Oakton Community College claim they are improving education by bucking the system.

Their approach to teaching is different from most high schools, community colleges, and universities and they say it's better.

But the average freshman student sitting in the classroom doesn't always realize this. College is a little confusing and Oakton is a little more confusing than most community colleges.

Oakton was created three years ago with no academic departments. The traditional structure organizing teachers according to the subjects they teach, in English departments, math departments, science departments, was replaced by what Oakton professors call the "group" or "cluster" system.

Oakton now has four such groups, each containing teachers of every subject taught at Oakton. Chairmen of the four groups say their system makes education better because it does away with inter-departmental jealousies and promotes a sharing of ideas between teachers.

Too often, new students at Oakton don't understand the group system and certainly can't take advantage of its good points. One student said he thought it had something to do with student ranking. "Like when you're in high school, you are in this group cause you're a dummy." Actually each group is a balance of students with different levels of ability, achievement and interests.

BUT THE GROUP structure is only part of the story. The group is used to promote the college's philosophy of education which says each person learns in a different way and should have the right to choose how he wants to learn. The Oakton philosophy also holds that education is more than an intellectual exercise but is also a change in self awareness.

Most new students, however, show little enthusiasm for the philosophy and some are skeptical. Professors say it is not unusual to enter a class of freshmen at the beginning of the year and find students sitting in the back of the room with their arms folded. Once when a professor asked students to participate in class discussion, a student told her, "For 13 years we've been told to sit down and shut up and now you ask us to stand up and speak."

The group chairmen think they know why students have that reaction to the group system and the college's philosophy. Students at Oakton, products of local high schools, have been conditioned to learn under the old system and have difficulty adjusting to Oakton's new ideas.

Too often the student has been isolated from his teachers and most of the knowledge he has acquired has been force fed, say the chairmen. At Oakton students are asked to call the professor by his first name, share his ideas and ambitions with him and choose not only his classes but the teaching method he prefers.

His reaction is mistrust, said group chairman Jim Butzek. The student doesn't believe what he hears about Oakton's philosophy, he isn't ready to take the initiative in promoting his own education, he's hesitant to talk to professors on a personal level, and he doesn't know how he wants to learn because up until now he has never had a choice.

For some students, Oakton is "totally different from high school and they have to re-think why they are here," said group chairman Ed Dolan. A common reaction is to stop studying and skip class.

"THEY HAVE a problem in being able to cope with new-found freedom," said group chairman John Tosto. "Many students flounder for awhile," he said, and some leave school.

"By and large Oakton doesn't fit the mold" for students, said group chairman Harvey Irlen, "they get frustrated, they get mad, they say it's too easy. They say it's too hard."

Dolan said he hears "complaining about what a rinky dink place Oakton is during the first semester and the second semester you hear the opposite."

There are two philosophies of education, said Dolan. In one the student is a "receptacle of knowledge to be poured into," he said, and in the other the "student is an active learner."

Oakton is putting the second theory in practice through the group system. Each group has between 25 and 30 full-time teachers and between 800 and 1,000 full and part-time students. As the college grows in enrollment more groups will be added so each group will remain its original size. Students and teachers have closer contact in small groups which make it easier for them to work together to plan classes and devise new teaching methods.

Oakton's philosophy is "an attempt to personalize education," said Dolan. Learning involves "not just a person's head but his total self. Learning is behavior change" and Oakton's goal is "to educate the whole man," he said.

"Education has fallen short of its theoretical goals," said Dolan, and one of the key reasons is the departmental structure. Instead of talking together to share ideas and discuss the individual problems of students, teachers in various departments are trying to outdo each other and soon "everybody is battling for funds," he said.

"WE ARE HERE to help students learn first and teach subjects second. Most schools do it the other way around," said Irlen.

One of the best measures of success of the group is the change in students once they adapt to the college's philosophy.

Sophomore John LaPorta said he came from a "really strict" high school and had a difficult time making himself study when he came to Oakton. "I was at the point where I was ready to quit school," he said, but professors in his group talked to him and he decided to stay.

"You're on your own," said sophomore Celeste Smith, who said when she began classes at Oakton, "I wasn't a student, I didn't buckle down." Now Celeste says

"my head's in a different place. The teachers are great, they'll help you out-side class."

Sophomore Gus Sisto said the freshmen "don't get involved in the atmosphere of the college but after you've been here for a semester you grow into it. You change your attitude toward life and your attitude toward others."

Oakton's reputation has grown through the student grapevine, said Irlen. Three years ago new students at Oakton were "turned off by the high school they came from because they were labeled non college material," he said. Those students still come to Oakton, he said, but each year there are more students who are academically and financially able to go elsewhere who choose the college.

Oakton is one of few junior colleges that shows a significant increase in enrollment during the spring semester, said Tosto. He interprets this to mean that despite the problems students have adapting to Oakton, they are returning for the second semester and they're convincing their friends to enroll. Oakton's student drop-out rate is lower than the average for junior colleges, he said.

But the group chairmen say the problems of helping students adjust to Oakton's group system and philosophy are not entirely solved and the system is still a long way from the ideal.

"IT'S TAKEN THREE years to make the group system work for the faculty," said Tosto, and it will probably take another three years to make it work for all students. The group chairmen hope to get the student more involved in curriculum planning and in writing the goals and objectives of individual classes.

"We're committed to the concept even though we may not know where it will eventually end up," said Tosto. Even if students never become closely involved with the groups it will still be better than the traditional department system, said Irlen, because it makes the faculty more effective.

It has been an experiment, said Butzek, but "we're not being experimental because we have nothing better to do. We're being experimental where the traditional doesn't work."

Fulle exonerated in stock 'conflict'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
 Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.
 Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.
 "I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."
 THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $400,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.

 About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 460 shares of stock in the bank between 1966 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.
 "A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."
 IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Fideleski.
 The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

 Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."
 The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.
 Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.
 Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stock holders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."
 "That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.
 Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

ALTHOUGH FOOTBALL and baseball are dominating the nation's television screens, autumn is also the season for soccer enthusiasts. The game has been gaining popularity through the efforts of such places as the Schwaben Center, just north of Buffalo Grove, where this game was played.

Friend thinks Chile holding area man

by STEVE BROWN
 "It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released," the words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank R. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.
 In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.
 "I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said.
 In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.
 Officially the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing." Now the state department has withdrawn that report.
 Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."
 A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.
 "Frank never made any bones about his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

 Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 26, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.
 "All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.
 HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.
 Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Franks told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

Drivers' wildcat strike stops garbage pickup

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

 A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

 The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbage men back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "bickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $5.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbage men at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

Proceeds to buy Adlai bust

Profits from the annual Adlai Stevenson High School senior class talent show will be used to purchase a head sculpture of the former Illinois governor for whom the school is named.

The show is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 27, at the Prairie View School.

The Dist. 125 school was named after Stevenson who lived in nearby Mottawa and voted in a Half Day elementary school.

Another recent gift to the school, contributed by the graduating classes of 1971 and 1972 in cooperation with the Sentry Club, is a new sign being erected at the main entrance. The Sentry Club is a parental athletic booster organization.

False bomb threat from angry shopper

An apparent disgruntled shopper called up the K-Mart in Wheeling Sunday with a bomb threat, according to police.

Wheeling fire officials evacuated the store, 780 W. Dundee Rd., prior to 3:30 p.m., the time the bomb was to have gone off. A search of the store revealed no explosive device.

Police said the caller telephoned twice. The male voice first said he had been "ripped off" by the store and that a bomb will go off. In the second call, he asked about mattresses and repeated his warning that a bomb would go off, even though it was after 3:30 p.m.

Attempt to derail Soo Line train fails

Two men apparently tried to derail a Soo Line RR train in Wheeling last weekend.

Wheeling police said the lock on a switching track had been cut with a hacksaw and the switch moved halfway, so any train crossing that point would derail. Police also said the red light indicator for trains had been shot out.

Police were called to the area of the switching track, between Palatine and Willow roads, by railroad officials late Saturday night. They were to aid railroad officials in chasing two suspects, but the pair escaped.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage put out for pickup yesterday morning were all still there at day's end as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., one of the Northwest suburbs' largest scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeowners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Arsonists strike twice

A coffee jar filled with kerosene was thrown at the garage of a Wheeling man last weekend, in one of two reported arson incidents. A bulletin board at Holmes Junior High School was also set on fire.

Police said Lester Jordan, 721 S. Dennis Rd., found the burnt out coffee jar just after 11 a.m. Sunday. The jar had landed about four feet from his garage and had left two burn marks on the lawn.

The bulletin board fire was reported at 8:06 p.m. Friday. About $160 worth of damage was caused to the structure which is on the front wall of the school building, 221 S. Wolf Rd. A witness told police she had seen two youths throwing matches in the area just before the fire started.

Omni-House offers TA

Omni-House: Youth Service Bureau this week begins a four-week introductory course in Transactional Analysis (TA) open to all residents of the area.

Transactional analysis, which identifies how people see themselves and how they interact with others, was originated by Eric Berne in his book, Games People Play. It was popularized by Thomas Harris in the book, I'm OK-You're OK.

The Omni-House course will be offered on four consecutive Wednesdays this month, beginning tomorrow from 7 to 10 p.m. at the bureau, 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Wheeling.

The course will be taught by Dr. Dean Niles and Dr. Marvin Halsey. Both have led TA workshops in the Chicago and Northwest suburbs for the past three years.

Anyone interested in participating in the course should contact Cheryl Torok at 541-0190. The fee for the series of classes is $20 per person.

Mr. and Mrs. Paul S. Juergensen

Mr. and Mrs. John Sheldon

Janice Anderson, daughter of the John Andersons, 20 W. Hlawatha Terrace, Mount Prospect, wore her maternal grandmother's diamond and pearl lavallier when she became the bride of John Sheldon on Aug. 18. John is the son of the Don Sheldons, Percival, Iowa, and both he and Janice are attending college in Nebraska.

Janice, a '70 graduate of Forest View High, is a senior at Nebraska Wesleyan University majoring in English and library science, and John attends the School of Pharmacy at the University of Nebraska. Janice will graduate next spring, and John in 1975. They are making their home in Lincoln.

The couple's double-ring wedding took place in Northwest Covenant Church, Mount Prospect. The 4:30 p.m. service was also candlelight and was followed by a reception for 135 guests at Lancer's Steak House, Schaumburg.

Janice chose her sister, Sue, as maid of honor and her sister, Marguerite, as bridesmaid. Joel Sheldon, Coralville, Iowa, was his brother's best man, and ushers were Julius Schaaf, a cousin from Coralville, and his brothers, Danley and Scott Sheldon, Percival.

The newlyweds honeymooned in Wisconsin for two days.

Jody Bergloff married amidst rainbow colors

Amidst a rainbow color scheme, Jody Bergloff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Roger Bergloff, Des Plaines, was married to Fred Gular, son of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Gular, San Mateo, Calif., on Aug. 31.

The 7 p.m. candlelight ceremony was performed in the Des Plaines Bible Church.

Jody chose an organza over taffeta gown with accents of applique lace. Matching lace bordered her long train and mantilla veil.

Bridal attendants, dressed in rainbow hued gowns, were Laurie Bergloff, sister of the bride, as maid of honor, and bridesmaids Laurie Engwal and Karlene Schmidke, Des Plaines.

BEST MAN was Charles Thomas, Texas. Tom Moore, San Diego, and Bill Bergloff, brother of the bride, were ushers.

A buffet dinner for 200 guests followed in the church auditorium.

Fred, a former resident of Wheeling, attended Harper College. The bride is a 1971 graduate of Maine East High School. The newlyweds are now at home in San Diego, where Fred is serving with the U.S. Navy.

Michigan State pair wed

Michigan State graduates Sheila Mary Quinn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James Quinn, 714 Rose Ave., Des Plaines, and Charles Harvey Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Simpson, Gaylord, Mich., exchanged marriage vows they composed in an Aug. 18 wedding at St. Mary's Church in Des Plaines.

Maid of honor for the double ring ceremony was Diana Quinn, sister of the bride. Sheila chose her sister, Honora, and Charlotte Freeman as bridesmaids.

Male attendants were Chuck Butcher and Bob Fritz, both of Gaylord, Mich., and best man was Curt Cremins, Pontiac, Mich. The bride's brothers, Kevin and Kenneth, served the noon Mass.

Following a buffet luncheon reception and dancing for 150 guests at Seven Eagles Restaurant, Des Plaines, the newlyweds left on a honeymoon trip to California. They are now at home in Michigan where Charles is an auditor for the state.

Sheila is a graduate of Maine West High School.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Simpson

Bridal party includes family

Lynn Rose Himes' three sisters, her brother and her bridegroom's sister all took part in her marriage to Paul Steven Juergensen Aug. 18. The candlelight, double ring wedding was held in Cumberland Baptist Church, Des Plaines, at 7 p.m.

Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ray E. Himes, 620 S. Edward St., Mount Prospect, Lynn and Paul, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Juergensen, 507 S. SeeGwin, Mount Prospect, met during their junior year at Prospect High. Lynn is also a graduate in home economics from Stout State, Menomonie, Wis., and Paul is a graduate in business administration from Defiance College, Defiance, Ohio. He is now with the Crouch-Walker Co., Chicago, and Lynn teaches home economics at Wheeling High.

LYNN CHOSE HER sister, Pam, as maid of honor and her sisters, Jane and Carrie, as junior bridesmaids. The groom's sister, Janice, and Lynn's college roommate, Mary Arntson, Menomonie, Wis., were bridesmaids.

Best man was Tom Darras, a fraternity brother of the groom from Central Islip, N.Y. Ushers were Mike Klein, Henry Russell and Tim Williams, all fraternity brothers of the groom from Defiance, and the bride's brother, Mark Himes.

The service was followed by a reception for 300 guests in the church Fellowship Hall after which Lynn and Paul left on a week's honeymoon in Florida. They are now making their home at Twelve Oaks, Arlington Heights.

The Home Line

by Dorothy Ritz

Dear Dorothy: Can you tell me how to get rid of weevils? I have a year-old baby and would not want to use a dangerous spray. — Ella Howard

You're going to have to let someone take care of the baby for a few hours. And you are going to have to quit stewing about sprays. Just go get the best house and garden spray you can — one with some residual power to do the job.

Let me drive home the point that this is one pest that can drive you half out of your mind if you don't get rid of the infestation. It's costly, too, because you have to get rid of everything affected: flour, rice, barley, spices. You have to wash the shelves thoroughly and then use the spray. Once the shelves are dry, only clean, closed packages should be put back.

When you are over this scare, make it a regular practice to store everything in the cereal line in airtight containers. Glass jars are best. And keep your shelves free of dust, fuzz and flour because this is the stuff the moths lay eggs in. And if you detect a weevil in any freshly opened package, return it to the store immediately — before it has a chance to spread.

The end of the mowing season is the time of year when homeowners need to be examining the bark at the base of all trees. The new type mowers do a lot of damage during the summer unless great care is used. Ripped bark is an immediate focal point for infection. All loose bark ought to be cut away now, painted with shellac and then coated with regular tree dressing. You'll have healthier trees next spring.

Dear Dorothy: You forgot one thing in your dissertation on pressure cooking — and I think it's important. With the small amount of liquid used and no air for oxidation, there is less likelihood of losing vitamins and minerals — Helen Douglas

TRAVEL LORE

by Clare Wright, TRAVEL EDITOR

If you're the type for fly-drive travel you can have a lot of fun seeing the world on a budget.

Here are a few questions to ask yourself before you take to unknown byways in a rental car:

- Do you like to drive?
- Are you adventurous?
- Can you cope with the unexpected?

If you can't answer "yes" to all three, you're better off to stick with the guided tours.

When you DO plan a fly/drive vacation, however, be sure to do your homework well.

Make a thorough study of the areas you'll be traveling in — with the help of guidebooks, travel brochures and good maps.

Memorize all international road signs. It helps if you have some knowledge of the language of the country you'll be driving in. Otherwise, arm yourself with the best phrase book you can find.

WHEN YOU arrive at your fly/drive destination abroad don't start out in the car until you've had a full night's sleep. Stay at the airport the first night.

Once you've picked up the car make sure you know how to work all the equipment. A quick once-over isn't enough.

The usual rental car overseas doesn't come equipped with automatic shift, air conditioning or other luxury features.

Remember that some countries require international driver's licenses. (We assume you've checked into this before you leave home!)

American licenses are recognized in Britain, France, Spain, Portugal and Italy.

Trans World Airlines, which serves major cities in Europe, has a number of cost-saving travel packages for the fly /drive traveler, from a $429 two-week stay in Ireland to a luxurious $1,681.70 Getaway Adventures' Fly/Drive 22-day visit to Italy, France and England.

Both tours include round-trip air fare, accommodations, rental car and other extras like a touring guide, flight bag and set of travel aids.

An opportunity to explore the German and Austrian countryside on a budget-priced fly/drive itinerary is being offered by Lufthansa German Airlines, with one, two and three-week Europecar "Explorer" and "Bonus" holidays that offer flexibility, accommodations and a self-drive car with unlimited mileage for castle hopping, wine tasting or riverside rambling over roads that run deep into the valleys of the Moselle and Rhine.

PRICES ON the one-week programs start as low as $429. Three-week Lufthansa "Bonus" holidays begin at $515.

Air France is featuring a number of economy-oriented driving tours of Normandy, Brittany, Southwestern France, the Chateau Country, and Burgundy. Their Flexi-Plan program provides trans-Atlantic air fare and a two-week car rental for as low as $478 per person from Chicago.

Driving in Europe isn't exactly like driving from the Northwest suburbs to St. Louis. Above all, don't plan too tight an itinerary.

If you take the secondary roads instead of the Autobahns, remember that distances covered on these off-beat (and more interesting) routes can take twice the time.

Don't be frustrated if you get lost a few times — or are delayed by a farmer's cows coming home.

That's part of the fun, too.

See the world behind the wheel

FLY/DRIVE VACATIONS offer flexible, economical itineraries for exploring regions of Europe like Brittany in France where pageantry and charm are part of 12th century cities like picturesque Quimper. Air France has a series of economy-oriented driving tours of France.

Herald editorial

Public spotlight on ethics

Gov. Daniel Walker has called a special session of the General Assembly — to run concurrently with the fall veto session set for Oct. 15 — to consider wide-ranging ethics legislation which he says can dissolve voter doubt about politicians.

In addition to "full and detailed disclosure" of all candidates' and public officials' economic interests, all campaign contributions and spending, and beneficiaries of secret land trusts, the governor is asking the legislature to fund his ethics board.

He also wants the legislature to begin anew on creation of state board of elections, mandated by the 1970 state constitution. The assembly passed a state elections board bill last spring which was vetoed by the governor because it lacked "independent representation" and provided for an unsatisfactory method of selecting board members.

"There is no doubt where the public stands," said Walker in announcing the special session. "It wants full disclosure of all finances associated with people in public life."

The Herald long has supported the ethics goals outlined by the governor.

We also agree with his assessment of voter doubt; the public has become sated with revelations of corruption, scandal, deceit and hypocrisy at all levels of government. This continuing chronicle of moral bankruptcy has fostered and strengthened a general mood of distrust, disillusionment and cynicism.

Public confidence in government has sunk to a new low; that confidence may never be restored until there are tough, loophole-free ethics and campaign disclosure laws to block hidden financial maneuvering and influence peddling, limit exorbitant campaign spending, and compel full disclosures of campaign costs and major political contributions.

Hopefully, the legislature will apply greater reason and responsibility in this special session than has been evident in the past. Perhaps we might be more optimistic if the governor lent some credence to his ethical concern and set an example of moral leadership by answering questions on his own methods of raising campaign funds.

It may be futile to expect any meaningful laws to emerge from the special session, but it will be beneficial to focus the public spotlight on this dominant issue and put all legislators solidly on record. We intend to scrutinize closely the performance of our local legislators on this critical question.

Disclosure of economic interests is the price of public life — and it is a small price to pay for the privilege of serving the citizens of this state. The people have a right to know about the administrators of public funds.

No law is going to make politicians ethical, but it can create conditions under which a politician can't afford not to be honest.

Labor gained at Dem Convention

by ARNOLD B. SAWISLAK
WASHINGTON — Despite the grumbling of George Meany and the other Old Bulls of organized labor, it was lawyers and businessmen rather than unionists who lost influence at the 1972 Democratic National Convention.

A survey of last year's delegates conducted for the Democratic Delegate Selection Commission by Prof. Robert A. Hillin of Georgetown University indicated that there actually was a larger percentage of labor officials holding delegate seats in 1972 than in 1968.

Hillin's survey, using questionnaires sent out this year and CBS statistics compiled for the last two conventions, showed sharp drops in the percentages of both businessmen and lawyers as delegates.

CBS showed 30 per cent of the delegates in 1968 were lawyers, compared to 12 per cent in 1972. Hillin's figures showed 10.9 per cent lawyers in 1972.

The broadcasting network showed 29 per cent of the delegates in 1968 were businessmen, and only 8 per cent last year. Here, Hillin found 12.4 per cent to be businessmen, still a sharp decrease.

CBS showed 4 per cent of the 1968 delegates were labor union officials, as compared to 5 per cent in 1972. Hillin's returns showed 5.4 per cent were union officers, and that 19.5 per cent were union members. CBS got 17 per cent union membership for 1972, but it did not have a comparable category in its 1968 statistics.

As was repeatedly emphasized during the 1972 convention, there were large increases in the percentages of women, blacks and young people on hand.

CBS showed the ratio of women rose from 13 per cent to 36 per cent between the 1968 and 1972 conventions, while Hillin places the female percentage last year at 41 per cent. The percentage of blacks, according to CBS, rose from 5.5 per cent to 15 per cent, while Hillin found an 11.6 per cent representation in 1972.

The network figures place the percentage of delegates under 30 in 1968 at 2.6, increasing to 23 in 1972. Hillin found the under-30 group to be only slightly less, 22.1 per cent.

Hillin also found that 72.9 per cent of the 1972 delegates were in the 30 to 59 age group and 5 per cent 60 or older. There was no comparison for those groups with 1968.

The Hillin survey, which got a return rate of 55.2 per cent from 3,103 mailed questionnaires, provides evidence that

She's forever surveyed

One of the reasons that the best laid plans of mice and men gang aft a-gley is that they're forever making surveys and then laying plans according to the results. I guess I shouldn't say, "they" — I don't think mice survey much except maybe to see if there's a cat around which probably accounts for the fact you don't see mice bogged down in a lot of paperwork.

Mankind is something else again. He loves paperwork and since a survey is the best way to generate a lot of it I am currently being surveyed both at home and at work. At work, it's to see how many phone calls I handle and at home I'm testing a breakfast product, the main difference being that I had a choice in the latter case.

Probably I should have said no when I was asked to assist in the consumer survey, but I feel that it's my right and my duty to help determine what products will or will not appear in the marketplace. Besides, it was free.

The real reason I should have said no is that I don't eat breakfast. It's enough effort for me to get my clothes on in the morning without having to worry about food, too, and what can I say about a product I try when I'm half asleep with a mouthful of toothpaste.

The survey at work isn't going to prove much, either.

Before it started I had so many phone calls there were days I wouldn't even have had time to make that little mark on a piece of paper to keep score. The day it began I thought my phone was out of order.

It's been acutely reminiscent of the old days, before I went to work when the kids were little and the man of the house would come home and say, "What did you do all day, the joint looks as bad as it did this morning."

And I would say, "If the blasted phone would quit ringing maybe I could get something done around here, would you believe I had 23 calls today?"

So he believed. Until the day he stayed home from work with a bad cold and the phone didn't ring until 4:30 in the afternoon. And then it was a wrong number.

Those were also the days that my mother used to complain that I didn't write often enough and I'd finally call her to say that my house had been like Grand Central Station between the kids and their friends and the neighbors popping in and out, salesmen at the front door and meter readers at the back and golly, Mom, one day last week 15 people not counting kids came to see me.

Then she came to visit and it was as though there was a typhoid sign on my gate post. Even kids and peddlers avoided my house and Mom went home convinced she'd raised a kid who could lie to her own mother.

That's how come I'm kind of worried about that office survey. If ganging a-gley means what I think it does, I'm probably out of a job.

Seeks mobile home laws

Your recent editorial regarding trailer parks presented an excellent account of the need for laws protecting residents of mobile home parks.

I share your concern with the absence of laws to protect mobile home owners. Many are senior citizens whose life savings are invested in their mobile homes. To permit (as our laws now do) summary evictions of these people from mobile home parks is intolerable.

In an effort to remedy this situation during the past session of the State Legislature, I sponsored Senate Bill 474, which would have provided mobile home owners with at least 60 days to relocate in case of an eviction; forbade the park management from prohibiting tenants' meetings in the park; and provided that no tenancy in a mobile home park may be terminated for the purpose of making the tenant's space in the park available for a person who has purchased a mobile home from the owner of the park or his agents.

In addition, evictions would be limited to the following five specified reasons (which would have to be specified in the notice of eviction):

- 1) failure of the tenant to comply with local ordinances and state laws and regulations relating to mobile homes;
- 2) conduct of the tenant constituting any annoyance to other tenants or an interference with park management;
- 3) failure of the tenant to comply with rules and regulations of the mobile home park legally established by the management;
- 4) non-payment of rent, charges, etc.; and
- 5) condemnation or change of use or ownership of the mobile home park.

Although SB 474 was defeated in the Senate Executive Committee, I shall continue working for the passage of a protective bill in future sessions. I commend your newspaper for its fine editorial and urge broad support for new and definitive laws to protect our citizens who reside in mobile home parks.

Local apartments opposed

We love our community and feel it is our civic duty to warn our neighbors of this rapidly spreading invasion of giants. Look around at Arlington Heights and the surrounding suburbs. You see them everywhere. Some are short and fat, some are tall and lean. Some are quite beautiful. Some are not so beautiful. But the fact is, they are here and are commonly called "apartments."

Some of you may sit back and say, "Oh, but they are no threat to our community — people must have a place to live." Maybe at this particular moment this is true. But if this invasion is allowed to continue at its present growth it will be a terrible threat to us.

Do you realize that in the North Arlington area we already have 45 per cent multi-family? Does this sound like "preserving the single-family nature of our community"? The damage to property values and the character of our neighborhoods are threatened by this continuing influx of "giants."

Most of us have moved to Arlington Heights and the surrounding suburbs to get away from the traffic, crowded schools, etc. A nice place in the suburbs was our dream. Is our dream turning into a nightmare? What does the future hold for us? Will there be 40 to 50 children in a classroom? Will it take us 20 minutes to exit into Arlington Heights?

Road traffic? Will we have to wait in line an hour at the supermarket to buy our groceries? We certainly hope not — and that's why we are urging all concerned citizens of Arlington Heights to help curtail this "invasion of giants."

Another four and five story apartment complex is being proposed for an area just east of Ivy Hill School. The village planning commission will meet Wednesday, Oct. 3, at 8 p.m. at the Arlington Heights Municipal Building to consider this new Meister-Neiberg proposal for a townhouse apartment development.

We urge you to join us in attending this very important Oct. 3 meeting. We have been told by city officials and board members that what they really pay attention to is an issue where people care enough to attend meetings to show their protest.

'Visit local schools'

I have noticed with great interest that many letters received by the Herald express concern for our local schools. How many of these concerned parents have taken time to visit their local school? I believe they should consider doing so, with the express intent of determining if their children are really receiving the "quality education" politicians are so fond of talking about, and which they are paying for; or if their children are being spoonfed a diet of progressive education.

Progressive education, as practiced today, is not educationally oriented, but politically oriented to produce within the student an acceptance of the system. Progressive education is further characterized as not only non-Christian, but dominated by secularist thinking.

All parents should ask themselves the following questions: Is geography being taught as the systematic study of land and water, or is it being taught as, "Tom's Airplane Trip to Niagara Falls?" Does the study of history concern itself with such events as the French and Indian War, the Boston Tea Party and the Emancipation Proclamation? Or does it consist of such trivia as how the pioneer women made linsey-woolsey clothing? Do the people in charge of their local schools, as well as those who seek positions on school boards, tell them that A-B-C-D-E-F grades are mere status symbols, and that the only purpose they serve is to promote unhealthy competition? Do they say that homework need not be assigned on the grounds that it is meaningless drudgery?

If these things are being done they've got Progressive education, which is not designed to benefit the individual. It is designed to benefit the system. If it is not designed to educate, it is designed to indoctrinate.

Fiery death

A burning cigarette led to a haunting Christmas tragedy

by BARRY SIGALE

Editor's Note: Each year 12,000 persons are killed by fire in the United States, most of them dying from smoke inhalation as a result of the flames. A new report by the National Commission on Fire Prevention and Control makes dozens of recommendations on how the country can best prevent fires and how firemen should be better equipped and able to fight them. In this story, the impact of a fire involving a Mount Prospect family is explored.

The tension was high on the night when Mr. and Mrs. Robert Reedy retold the story of the death of their 19-year-old son, Brian, in a house fire nearly two years ago. The tension was as extreme as the smoke was thick on that fatal night.

It was a story of terror, this nightmare fire, of a lighted cigarette touching off flammable substances and sending dense smoke belching through the Mount Prospect house. Brian Reedy died trying to escape from the basement where the fire started.

It was the kind of story that is almost as difficult to listen to as it is to tell.

ALWAYS SAFETY-CONSCIOUS — especially with eight children and a grandmother living in the house — the Reedys were struck a tragic blow, one that haunts them now and will continue to stalk them forever. The one saving grace was that no one else was killed that night.

The fire occurred Christmas Eve, 1971, and received less newspaper and television coverage than normal because of the Christmas tree fire in Arlington Heights which resulted in the death of seven members of the same family.

These deaths were among 12,000 in the United States that year and among 700,000 house fires. Most fires are caused by human error, according to reports by the National Commission on Fire Prevention and Control. It was concluded that the fire at the Reedys' home at 307 S. Elmhurst Rd. fell into the same category.

THE REEDYS are a close-knit family

BEFORE HIS TRAGIC death in a house fire nearly two years ago, Brian Reedy struck this happy pose. At 19 years old, Reedy was killed in his Mount Prospect home when fire broke out Christmas Eve. He was one of 12,000 persons killed by fire in the U.S. yearly.

although the oldest children, now adults, have left home for independent lives and their advantages. John, 24, lives in Hoffman Estates, while Robert Jr., 23, lives in Rockford, N.C. Brian's twin brother, Mark, now 21; Jim, who was sleeping near Brian when the fire started; Ann, 18; Mary Pat, 14; and Katie, 11; all live at home as well as Mrs. Reedy's mother.

But the fire and Brian's death took a lot out of everybody in the family. The Reedys choked back the tears as they relived that nightmare.

"Brian's death has been accepted by the family," Reedy said. "We still mention him casually. Jim has been close-mouthed but he still has his good sense of humor. The girls will say 'I miss Brian' and things like that. We always talk about it and cry about it."

"The children are more considerate of each other now. I suppose there are pluses in everything. We were always a close family. It's hard to measure if we're closer now. The fire hasn't had an appalling effect on the family but I guess it has brought everyone closer."

KATIE, LISTENING to her father's thoughts on the tragedy, added, "I was very upset... like, I miss Brian. I knew this happened to people but I didn't think it would happen to us. I don't know how I feel."

Reedy described the house as an "inferno" the night of the fire and Mrs. Reedy said, "you can't breathe and you can't see. There's no feeling like it in the world. You can't describe it."

According to Reedy, Brian had been out drinking beer with his friends just before the fire, which was reported about 5:20 a.m. His son got home about 4 a.m. and went to bed. It was determined later that he didn't go right to sleep but stayed up to smoke. A lighted cigarette started the fire.

Brian's father was awakened more than an hour after the fire began when Jim, sleeping in the same area of the basement, began screaming that the house was on fire. The rest of the sleeping family scrambled outside.

JIM WAS ABLE to escape from the basement but the dense smoke prevented Brian from finding the stairway leading to upstairs and safety. He was found later in the laundry room after attempting to flee. He died of smoke inhalation, the most common cause of fire death.

"I went downstairs to try to get to him," said Reedy, "but I couldn't find him. The basement was full of black smoke." Reedy tried to get in the basement another way, by breaking the basement window, but still couldn't get in. Mount Prospect firemen arrived about the same time and recovered the body.

Reedy, 52, a labor negotiator for industrial relations at Container Corporation of America, said he has always planned for and instructed his family of the best ways to escape from a house fire.

"We always had a plan of escape for upstairs," he said. "The supposition was that we would have to escape by going down a tree or coming down over the garage."

REEDY'S ATTITUDE differs greatly from the average citizen who doesn't think he'll ever be affected by a fire, doesn't take precautions for preventing one from starting and if one does flare up thinks he can put it out himself.

Firemen say the most dangerous fire to fight is one like at the Reedy's 16-year-old home, in a basement, a small, confined area where the intense heat turns the room into an oven. It is not as sensational as a blazing house fire but just as deadly. And Reedy appreciates all what firefighters have to go through.

"The firemen had to have a lot of courage to go in there (the basement)," Reedy said. "The place was an inferno. You cannot comprehend what a fire is like until you experience it. I can't say enough about the fire department."

HOW WELL DOES YOUR CHILD READ?

Better grades in all subjects will be far more difficult to achieve if your youngster is allowed to continue reading below his potential for the rest of his academic career.

Parents interested in helping their children prepare for the competition ahead are urged to consider a 12-week GTA-sponsored Reading Program to be conducted on Saturday mornings at the Church of the Incarnation (just 2 miles east of Woodfield on Golf Road) in Arlington Heights beginning in late October.

Taught by an outstanding faculty, this course has since 1963 enjoyed remarkable success in helping poor and average readers improve their speed, comprehension and interpretation. Limited enrollment. Early application advisable.

The dollars game

Pros visit area, talk about the money problem

by MIKE KLEIN

Dick Motta of Northbrook and his Chicago Bulls resume their title pursuit one week from tonight at the Stadium, picking up where they left off last spring ... against the Los Angeles Lakers.

But the Bulls needn't worry about Wilt Chamberlain this time around. And therein lies the crux that could bring a sudden and fatal blow to professional basketball.

Chamberlain apparently ended his always controversial NBA career last week by signing a player-coach pact with the American Basketball Association San Diego Conquistadors. He will receive a reported $600,000 over three years.

The greatest giant — your average 7-foot black millionaire who lives next door — is the biggest ABA treasure yet secured during basketball's inter-league strife.

Only by stealing Milwaukee's Kareem Abdul-Jabbar could the ABA have bested its acquisition of Chamberlain. They have been the NBA's best gate draws since Bill Russell retired. "You don't see them packing the Stadium to watch Nate Archibald, do you?" offered Bulls' assistant coach Phil Johnson.

But this might prove an ominous gain for the ABA, one basketball men in both leagues will regret. And that regretting could be just a playoff or two away.

"If we don't have a merger or some change of pattern in thinking within a couple years, it won't matter where he or anybody else jumps because we'll all be out of business anyhow," said ex-Boston Celtic great Bob Cousy. "This whole thing can only go so far. It's gone too far already."

Cousy spoke out after his Kansas City-Omaha Kings lost, 123-106, to Houston's Rockets on Sunday night before 2,000 fans at Arlington High School. But he wasn't alone. "I'm worried a little, too," admitted Motta after his Bulls went down, 95-90, to Bill Fitch's Cleveland Cavaliers.

"It's got to change sooner or later because the money's going to run out," Motta insisted. "One of these days, the owners are going to say, 'Hey, that's it,' and dissolve the league. They might wait a year, they might wait six months."

(At this point, center Dennis Awtry looked at Motta and said, "Then why did you have me sign a deferred payments contract?")

Pro basketball is perhaps the greatest tax write-off (or rip-off) ever thrust upon the Internal Revenue Service. Three NBA franchises — New York, Los Angeles and Milwaukee — finished money ahead last season. There were none so fortunate in the ABA.

Dick Motta

Chicago's Bulls, a so-called "successful" franchise, managed to lose $1.7 million, according to Motta. The club lost $800,000 cash and the rest in depreciation. Motta became coach and general manager when Pat Williams was demoted before finding a better horizon with Atlanta's Hawks.

The overall problem is so serious that last year, Congress authored a little green manual entitled: "Economics of Professional Basketball." Good reading, says Motta.

How did all this happen? Who's right; who's wrong? Indeed, how many sides comprise this financial idiosyncrasy?

Professional basketball players garner a higher average salary than their counterparts in baseball or football. Don't forget, however, their much smaller numbers.

Now look at the cases of Chamberlain and Bulls' All-Pro forward Bob Love who wants to renegotiate his five-year pact.

Chamberlain is insurance there will be an ABA five years hence unless the entire structure crumbles. "He'll go to Salt Lake City five times, Memphis five times and the attendance will go up," Motta said. "It'll lengthen the war unless we get some kind of merger."

Cousy hinted at more than just money differences between The Stilt and Lakers' owner Jack Kent Cooke.

About Chamberlain, the Bulls' Love said: "If Wilt stayed in the NBA, he could go another year. Over there, he can go as a player-coach and still get his money. At Wilt's age, that's all that matters is the money. It doesn't matter who you're playing for or who you're playing with."

Love blamed the financial crisis on rookies and their sometimes huge bonus checks. "As long as the owners are willing to give these guys out of school all that money, it'll stay the same way," he said. "You've got veterans that deserve the money that aren't getting it. That's how it got out of hand."

To an extent, Motta agreed. "You've got a lot of young kids who aren't earning it," he said. But Motta has his share of head benders wondering about Love.

The All-Pro forward signed a five-year pact two seasons ago. He wanted to renegotiate last year so the Bulls obliged. Now he wants to rewrite the pact again. "The owners said enough of that bull," Motta said.

"If they want to hold me out, that's fine. Whatever they decide is okay with me," Love said. Motta countered: "We'd give him up if the trade was right. But we don't want to do that."

The reserve clause binds Love to Chicago through this and three more seasons. Chamberlain's playing rights still belong to Los Angeles and it's expected Cooke will sue if Wilt takes the court as a Conquistador.

"If he plays, that defeats the whole purpose of the player contract," said Johnny Egan, youthful head coach of Houston's Rockets. "There have been some guys like Billy Cunningham who jumped and had problems. Julius Erving tried to come back with Milwaukee. And he played a few exhibitions with Atlanta, but he's still in the ABA."

Now a New York Net, Erving is probably the sole reason that Motta thinks that ABA team could turn a profit this year.

The longer you look at this situation, the messier it becomes. There are million dollar rookies, million dollar veterans and all sorts of hundred thousand dollar guys sitting on the bench.

As Houston's Egan said: "All the complications of being in professional sports get thicker and thicker every year. I'll be honest with you, I really can't keep up with it."

The big guys — the Chamberlains and the Ervings — get all the publicity. It's up to the courts to decide now.

And at least for the moment, there will be basketball between the Bulls and Lakers next Tuesday night in Chicago Stadium. That's pretty certain.

Larry Everhart

What makes good sports book?

I'M BEGINNING to come to the conclusion that the less a sports book is about sports, the better.

Bananas? Yeah, it does sound a little crazy, and maybe it's not that simple — but there's some truth in it, I think.

Sure, a book by and about a famous sports figure has to deal with his profession. They all do to varying degrees, and sometimes it's not bad reading. After all, the author is usually a big star (though not necessarily in this day and age, as witness this year's new book about Keith Magnuson). If the author or subject matter were not at least famous (I will concede that about Magnuson), he wouldn't have written the book. Or if he did, we wouldn't buy it.

However, books which dwell too much about any athlete or sport can become cumbersome and dry. After all, it's usually no more than rehashing. If a guy is that famous, we've already read about and discussed his exploits from daily newspapers. Reading them again is repetitious.

These thoughts, and comparing sports books, even some which are years old, drifted to mind after I finished two recently — "The Boys of Summer" by Roger Kahn and "When All the Laughter Died in Sorrow" by Lance Rentzel.

Yes, I know "The Boys of Summer" is no longer very current. All the talk about it was last year. But if you think that's had, wait till I bring up Bill Veeck's first book, which was published in 1963.

Anyway, it occurred to me after finishing both "The Boys of Summer" and "When All the Laughter Died in Sorrow" that while I thought each was superb, neither is really a sports book.

Kahn's book dealt with the Dodgers of the early 1950's and Rentzel's, of course, with himself, the pro football star. Yet baseball as such is only a minor part of the former and football incidental in the latter.

Which is partly why I didn't want to put either book down once I started them. I read enough about baseball and football in the sports pages every day.

The Rentzel book is about a boy growing up, slowly becoming a man, and about special problems along the way caused by a unique background and unique situations. It's about a lot of little troubles adding up to one big nightmare. It is fascinating.

Kahn's book is so exceptional because of the vivid way in which it gets across one central theme — the relentlessness of time and what an inconquerable enemy it is to all man. It is about what the passing years can do to us all. And it so superbly gets across the point that fame is fleeting, that even the most seemingly invincible athletic heroes are reduced again to common men when their brief career is gone.

In other words, these outstanding books — and others like them — don't contain much about how or why certain teams won games or championships. Yet, certainly, the sports appeal and fame of the authors are what get us reading in the first place.

Other books that I would place near the top of my all-time list are both of Jerry Kramer's — "Instant Replay" and "My Farewell to Football" — both of Bill Veeck's — "Veeck As in Wreck" and "The Hustler's Handbook." Somewhere in the middle I would place "Brian Piccolo: A Short Season," "I Am Thirld" by Gale Sayers, and "My Wide World" by Jim McKay. (Hooray! We finally got a new one in there!)

And how could I have almost forgotten Jim Bouton's classic, "Ball Four." Besides being highly entertaining and amusing, this was an important book because it showed us once and for all that baseball players are not all clean-cut All-Americans. Off the field, they're just human like you and me.

About "Stop Action," by Dick Butkus, "Confessions of A Dirty Football Player" by Johnny Sample and "I Can't Wait Until Tomorrow Because I Get Beter Looking Every Day" by Joe Namath — well, if you can't say something nice, maybe it's best not to say anything.

To start again at the top of that brief list:

Jerry Kramer, the all-pro guard of the Green Bay Packers in the sixties, was a great football player. He is just as great a writer. But it's probably his one-in-a-million life that kept me glued to his last book, "My Farewell to Football."

Kramer has had so many unbelievable things happen to him — many of them not football-related — that I can't begin to go into them. But take my word for it, his second book is incredible — but all true. His first, "Instant Replay," gave many of us our first vivid, in-depth look at what it's like to be a pro football player or under none other than Vince Lombardi and on a very special team. And it does so without dwelling on football in too much detail.

Veeck's books are spell-binding for the same general reason — because he's writing about a career which is extremely unusual. He is also a very colorful writer. And as we all know, only Veeck could dream up some of his zany ideas.

The ones I classified next are better than average. They're well-written and certainly worth reading. It's just that they didn't have quite the glitter, or weren't as memorable, as the top books. But each is about or by a wonderful person and "My Wide World," especially, is a very unique kind of book. And certainly Brian Piccolo and Gale Sayers are both very special.

The books by Namath, Sample and Butkus, (in each case, with help from writers that must have been considerable) simply don't contain anything that excelling or unusual about the authors as people — even though they are exceptional football talents. Again, we can see that something special and non-sports-related, is needed for a good book.

Basically, these three books are about guys who grew up in average neighborhoods and were average in every way except athletically. But describing their feats on the field is not nearly enough. And whatever faults a book like this can have, the worst is failing to be interesting.

Of course, there are plenty of sports books, good and bad, that haven't been mentioned here. I'll never read them all, at the rate they're coming out. If I live to be 100.

But these are enough to make comparisons, and realize what a good book of this type is all about — people, more than anything.

NO GO. This pass, although seeming to be in the clutches of Forest View's Mark Buchek, was incomplete during the Falcons' 31-21 loss at Hersey in fog Friday night.

Fremd wins at Janesville; Palatine rules Barrington

by LARRY EVERHART
Cross Country Editor

As it has been every weekend this season, Fremd was again the top story among area cross country teams in invitational Saturday.

The Vikings, unbeaten in all meets this season and looking like a threat for the state title with their tremendous depth and balance, swept all three classes in the 19-team Midwest Invitational at Janesville, Wis. over a very wet, soft 2.5-mile course. Rockford Guilford was a strong second, 10 points behind, and Arlington a distant third in the Class A race.

In both Class B and C, Rockford Guilford was also second to Fremd. Arlington was fifth in B and eighth in C. Runners of any class in school can enter any race. Fremd took third, fourth and fifth places individually in the A race to assure the title. Chuck Ruppenthal was top Viking with 12:37 for the 2½ miles. Will Fieldhouse has 12:42 and Dave Scott 12:44. Paul Klynos was 11th, Eric Inbody 18th and the others were Mike Rohrer, Jim Galis and Steve Henricks.

Palatine was the area's other invitational winner, ruling over eight other teams at Barrington. The Pirates had 39 points, Evanston 50, Waukegan 51, Barrington 60, Wheeling 145, St. Viator 174, Deerfield 188, Rolling Meadows 203 and Warren 236.

Dear Erdahl of Waukegan was individual winner over the three-mile tour with 15:22. Dave Tehle and Paul Kearns took third and fourth for Palatine with 15:36 and 15:44. Other Pirates were John Thullen with seventh, Carl Klewert ninth and Rick Scholl 15th.

Wheeling's top man was John Messenger with 10th, followed by Jim Leeper and Augie Ziccarelli. Mark Nelles led St. Viator with 21st and Bob Kohn was next. Leon. Craig Dahquist and Mike Scott were tops for Rolling Meadows.

Meadows' fine freshman team won on their level and Palatine was third. Tom Choice and Ken Snow ran 1-2 for the Mustangs. In the sophomore race Rich Reese was second and Roy Sackett fifth for Wheeling.

Arnie Jackson of Schaumburg continued to wow onlookers and destroyed another course record as the Saxons were fifth in the 27-team Niles West Invitational. The host team won easily.

Jackson, one of the top contenders for the state crown who may soon break 14 minutes for three miles, ran 14:37.6 for that distance on another muddy course. The old record had been 15:05.

Denny Garber, Jackson's coach, said, "I told him about 15 minutes would be a good day's work. Considering that the course was so muddy, the last 200 yards were under six inches of water, and Arnie ran hard workouts all week and had stiff legs, he did real well."

Mike Palmer and Mike Hommowun were the next Saxons with ninth and 15th.

Conant finished a strong third in the 13-team Pekin Invitational even though coach Jack Ary felt "it wasn't one of our better performances. At Rockford (where they were second to Fremd in a big field) we had a 22-second spread. If we had done that again we would have won."

Peoria Central won with 62 points, New Trier West had 69, Conant 71 and Maine North 102 ahead of nine other teams.

Dave Elderkin's 16 minutes flat for a wet, hilly three-mile run paced Conant with fourth place and Mark Kaufman was another second back for the Cougars. John Bond was 14th (he might have been much higher had he not fallen), and Rick Jensen and Steve Watron were next for Conant.

The Cougar frosh-soph tied New Trier West for first place with Mike Monson second, Mike Moran third and Jeff Krautwurst eighth.

Arlington and Fremd had already seen one another just two days before both went to Janesville when they met in a dual, with Fremd dominating, 15-5. The first seven finishers were Vikings — Fieldhouse with 13:59 for 1.75 miles at Union Oil grounds, Scott (14:05), John Miller (14:07), Ruppenthal, Galis, Klynos and Geoff Bolton. All were under 14:20.

John Lerchenfeld and Greg Hansen topped Arlington with eighth and ninth, followed by Fremd's Inbody, Ed Pittenger and Rohrer.

Another dual meet had Forest View winning 27-28 at Libertyville on a three-mile course. Tony Hess and Mike Ham led with second and third, followed by Denny Robins, Fred Gruenwald and Steve Goerscher for the Falcons.

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLEICHA

The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and one of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12 member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Junior Woman's Club plans bike safety program

by JOE FRANZ

The Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club hopes to start a mandatory bike safety program for village youths by next spring.

Rita Guttman, president of the group, said yesterday her organization got the idea of a bike safety program from other communities that have started them. "We began watching kids ride around here and decided a program was needed," she said.

Mrs. Guttman said she thinks a program is necessary because many bike riders do not take traffic laws seriously. "Many of them expect others to watch out for them. We have to show them that they are bound by the same rules of the road as drivers," she said.

ALTHOUGH PLANS for implementing the program are only tentative, Mrs. Guttman said her club would like to set up a program similar to the one now drivers are required to take. She said this could probably be done most effectively through the elementary schools.

The first year of the program all children wishing to ride bikes could go through the program. After the program is under way, children could go through the program when they reach a certain grade in school.

Under the program being considered children would view movies and receive classroom instruction on bike safety. Before a child would be allowed to ride a bike on the street he would have to pass a written test and a test designed to test his bicycle riding skills.

Mrs. Guttman said such tests are available through the National Safety Council. The bike riding tests are usually given on a miniature highway course, similar to driving test courses.

MRS. GUTTMAN said she would prefer a test where the child is required to go on the street and cope with actual traffic. "I think putting them on the street and making them obey traffic laws would be a good thing. It would show them that a bike can be a very dangerous toy if traffic laws are not observed."

Since there are no state laws requiring bike safety programs, any mandatory program would have to come through a village ordinance. Police Chief Harry Walsh said yesterday he will cooperate with the club to get a program started.

Walsh said last spring the police department passed out booklets and made presentations on bike safety at every school in the village. The presentations were made in conjunction with the bike registration program.

WALSH SAID the police would like to do more with bike safety, but can't because of personnel limitations. He, however, did say he thinks the safety presentations, along with the department's new policy of issuing warning tickets to bike riders who violate traffic laws, has been beneficial in reducing accidents involving bike riders.

Mrs. Guttman said her group plans to meet with the police department, school districts and citizens to get the program off the ground.

Covers village board actions for 5 years

U.S. subpoenas Wheeling's records

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Board records for the past five years have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged building and zoning shakedowns in that village yesterday.

A Herald reporter was present Friday when a federal agent arrived at the Wheeling Village Hall to serve the subpoena on Village Mgr. George Passolt.

It was learned yesterday that the document served on the village manager was a subpoena for board records. Passolt refused to comment, noting that grand jury proceedings are secret.

Other village officials contacted yesterday also declined to comment on the subpoena or even confirm that board records had been subpoenaed. "If there's any announcement of that magnitude, I think it should come from the village manager," said Trustee John Koeppen.

Only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said specifically that he knew nothing about the subpoenaed records. He said he knew village building and zoning records had been subpoenaed earlier this year, but said he had not been informed of the new subpoena.

Likewise, federal officials connected with the investigation said they could make no comment on the matter.

THE VILLAGE BOARD records are the latest documents to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury. Early this summer, several cartons of village building and zoning records were turned over to the grand jury, which has been hearing testimony for several months.

The investigation by U.S. Atty. James Thompson's office is focused on reports of payoffs by developers to obtain village approval of such things as annexation, zoning, subdivision plans and water and sewer lines.

Targets of the federal grand jury probe include certain present or former village officials as well as others suspected of violating the Hobbs Act by using extortion and bribery to interfere with interstate commerce.

The Wheeling case is also expected to make use of a large number of witnesses, many of them developers of major Wheeling projects built in the past five years. Some of these developers, subpoenaed by the grand jury, have been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

ONE SOURCE close to the grand jury proceedings indicated to the Herald yesterday that at least one aspect of the federal inquiry is the manner in which elections are conducted. Witnesses before the grand jury were asked how elections are run in Wheeling, how candidates are selected and what causes individuals to either seek public office or, once elected, to remain in public office.

Although government inquiry into election procedures in Wheeling was not considered the purpose of the original investigation, illegal election practices would be legitimate grounds for federal agents to pursue. Violations of election law could also violate federal statutes.

High Court rules against parochial

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $5 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Many activities set at library

Crafts demonstrations, evening film programs and children's storytime are three of the fall activities planned by the Wheeling Public Library.

Joyce Kurps will demonstrate the making of bread dough flowers today and next Tuesday, Oct. 9 in sessions set to begin at 10 a.m. at the library.

Paper quilting will be taught by Linda Bauer at 10 a.m. Oct. 16 and 23. The crafts classes are free.

Recent popular feature-length films will be shown at the library every other

Monday evening at 8. A schedule of films and the dates they will be shown may be obtained by calling the library at 537-4011.

Storytime for three- and four-year-olds will begin tomorrow at the library and Thursday at Longfellow School in Buffalo Grove.

The Buffalo Grove storytime will be co-sponsored by the Buffalo Grove Junior Woman's Club.

Parents may register their children to participate in storytime by calling the library.

Little City volunteers honored for work

Volunteers from Buffalo Grove, Inverness and Palatine were among 11 women honored recently at the Little City residential training and treatment center for the mentally handicapped in Palatine.

Local women who received award pins for 1,000 hours of service are Jean Lohse of Buffalo Grove and Lillian Kiefer and Marie Brown of Inverness.

Award pins for 500 hours of service went to Marge Schild and Nellie Murray of Inverness and Helen Muchow of Palatine.

Honorable mention for volunteer service totaling 100 hours or more went to Rosemary Belsner of Buffalo Grove and Joan Ball and Mrs. Eddie Schroeder of Inverness.

People interested in volunteering to work at Little City may contact Norine Davies at 358-5510. Mrs. Davies is the administrative coordinator of the center.

$312 in goods stolen from home

Burglars apparently used a piece of concrete to smash the front door window of the Fred Moynahan residence, 999 Harvard Ln., Buffalo Grove, sometime last weekend, according to police.

Taken in the burglary were a portable television set, some cash, two clock radios and a coin collection. Police estimated the loss at $312. The break-in occurred between 4 p.m. Saturday and 4 p.m. Sunday, police said.

Fulle exonerated in stock 'conflict'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT
Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.
Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.
"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

The board members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $400,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.
About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 468 shares of stock in the bank between 1968 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.
"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."
IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Fifeleski.
The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."
The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.
Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.
Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stockholders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."
"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.
Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

ALTHOUGH FOOTBALL and baseball are dominating the nation's television screens, autumn is also the season for soccer enthusiasts. The game has been gaining popularity through the efforts of such places as the Schwaben Center, just north of Buffalo Grove, where this game was played.

Friend thinks Chile holding area man

by STEVE BROWN
"It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released."
The words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank H. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.
In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.
"I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said.
In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.
Officially the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing." Now the state department has withdrawn that report.
Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."
A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.
"Frank never made any bones about his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 26, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.
"All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.
HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.
Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Frank, told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.
Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.
"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.
Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

Drivers' wildcat strike stops garbage pickup

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Pal-

atine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.
Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbage men back on the job while the negotiations continue.
The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "bickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.
David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."
The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $5.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.
Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbage men at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

Students sought for band

Band and orchestra instructors at Holmes Junior High School in Dist. 21 in Wheeling are recruiting fourth and fifth graders interested in learning to play string and wind instruments other than the guitar.
Anyone interested or who would like further information about the lessons should contact Jerry Hawthorne, band director or Thomas Torchedio, orchestra director, at 337-3570.

Proceeds to buy Adlai bust

Profits from the annual Adlai Stevenson High School senior class talent show will be used to purchase a head sculpture of the former Illinois governor for whom the school is named.

The show is scheduled for Saturday, Oct. 27, at the Prairie View School.

The Dist. 125 school was named after Stevenson who lived in nearby Melton and voted in a Half Day elementary school.

Another recent gift to the school, contributed by the graduating classes of 1971 and 1972 in cooperation with the Sentry Club, is a new sign being erected at the main entrance. The Sentry Club is a parental athletic booster organization.

False bomb threat from angry shopper

An apparent disgruntled shopper called up the K-Mart in Wheeling Sunday with a bomb threat, according to police.

Wheeling fire officials evacuated the store, 780 W. Dundee Rd., prior to 3:30 p.m., the time the bomb was to have gone off. A search of the store revealed no explosive device.

Police said the caller telephoned twice. The male voice first said he had been "ripped off" by the store and that a bomb will go off. In the second call, he asked about mattresses and repeated his warning that a bomb would go off, even though it was after 3:30 p.m.

Attempt to derail Soo Line train fails

Two men apparently tried to derail a Soo Line RR train in Wheeling last weekend.

Wheeling police said the lock on a switching track had been cut with a hacksaw and the switch moved halfway, so any train crossing that point would derail. Police also said the red light indicator for trains had been shot out.

Police were called to the area of the switching track, between Palatine and Willow roads, by railroad officials late Saturday night. They were to aid railroad officials in chasing two suspects, but the pair escaped.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage put out for pickup yesterday morning were all still there at day's end as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois, Inc., one of the Northwest suburbs' largest scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeowners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Arsonists strike twice

A coffee jar filled with kerosene was thrown at the garage of a Wheeling man last weekend, in one of two reported arson incidents. A bulletin board at Holmes Junior High School was also set on fire.
Police said Lester Jordan, 721 S. Dennis Rd., found the burnt out coffee jar just after 11 a.m. Sunday. The jar had landed about four feet from his garage and had left two burn marks on the lawn.
The bulletin board fire was reported at 8:06 p.m. Friday. About $160 worth of damage was caused to the structure which is on the front wall of the school building, 221 S. Wolf Rd. A witness told police she had seen two youths throwing matches in the area just before the fire started.

Omni-House offers TA

Omni-House: Youth Service Bureau this week begins a four-week introductory course in Transactional Analysis (TA) open to all residents of the area.
Transactional analysis, which identifies how people see themselves and how they interact with others, was originated by Eric Berne in his book, Games People Play. It was popularized by Thomas Harris in the book, I'm OK-You're OK.

The Omni-House course will be offered on four consecutive Wednesdays this month, beginning tomorrow from 7 to 10 p.m. at the bureau, 516 N. Milwaukee Ave. in Wheeling.

The course will be taught by Dr. Dean Niles and Dr. Marvin Halsey. Both have led TA workshops in the Chicago and Northwest suburbs for the past three years.

Anyone interested in participating in the course should contact Cheryl Torok at 541-0190. The fee for the series of classes is $20 per person.

Plan for low, moderate-income housing, suburbs urged

by KAREN BLECHIA

The Northwest suburbs will need 16,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 600 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,600 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said.

"This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Fulle, others exonerated in bank stock 'conflict'

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Fillettski.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stock holders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."

"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.

Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county

Court finds five health violations

Landlord ordered to comply with code

A Des Plaines landlord was ordered by a Cook County Circuit Court Judge yesterday to comply with all sections of the city health code.

City officials had charged that an apartment building at 1510 Willow St., which is owned by Arsenio Carabetta, was in violation of five sections of the health code.

Circuit Court Judge Albert LaPlante ruled that Carabetta would have to comply with city regulations. The city cited the violations as being: Means of exit are obstructed, width of hallways and stairways are obstructed, accumulated garbage attracting flies, vermin or rats, abandoned car left on property, and refuse deposited on sidewalks, streets and alleys.

Carabetta told the court he intended to obtain the services of a maintenance company to clean up the building. The landlord said he has had trouble getting tenants to help clean up the property.

THE HERALD had revealed the problems tenants were having in the apartment building last month. At that time Carabetta blamed the tenants and threatened to have them evicted if they complained to city officials about the condition of the apartments.

Des Plaines Sanitarian Marvin Martin said in court yesterday the city has not been satisfied with the landlord's efforts to clean up the property.

Martin said the city will continue to inspect the property to ensure Carabetta complies with the court's order.

Carabetta said he wants to comply with all city regulations. No new court date has been set on the matter.

Residents of the complex, which contains 10 apartments, told a Herald reporter plumbing in the building was backed up, appliances were broken and windows were shattered.

THEY SAID that they had repeatedly asked that the problems be corrected, but received no assistance.

Both building and fire department inspectors plan to examine the interior of the building for other code violations. Previous inspections had been confined to the exterior.

High Court rules against parochialism

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $5 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1961 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Car sustains $1,200 damage in fire

Fire of an undetermined origin caused $1,200 damage early Sunday to a car owned by a Des Plaines resident.

According to Des Plaines Fire Department reports, the victim Walter Mullineaux, 15 Wisconsin Dr., was awakened shortly after midnight by what sounded like an explosion and, looking outside, noticed his auto a 1968 Buick in flames. The car had been left in a driveway outside the house.

Firemen arrived minutes later and quickly extinguished the flames with a booster line. No one was injured in the short blaze.

Mullineaux told police he noticed an empty bottle in the car while checking the auto yesterday morning.

Fire inspectors said however that a check of the car yesterday turned up no evidence of possible arson, because the car's interior was so badly burned.

Burglars get $1,800 in cash, jewelry

Burglars stole more than $1,800 in cash and jewelry after breaking into the home of a Des Plaines resident Saturday evening, police said.

The victim, Gerald Weiss, 505 Bell Dr., told police he returned home about 2 a.m. Sunday from an evening out and noticed the burglars had broken in through a bedroom window.

Police said the burglars had gone through and disturbed several rooms.

Stolen was $500 in cash along with several hundred dollars worth of jewelry, fishing gear and two small handguns.

Burglars had also broken into the home of John Kouletos, 2109 Eastview Dr., and stole some $200 in cash, according to reports.

Kouletos returned from vacation Saturday and noticed a rear door forced open, police said.

No trash collection slated for Monday

There will be no garbage collection Monday, Oct. 8, due to the Columbus Day holiday, according to a spokesman for the Public Works Department.

Persons with a Monday garbage day will have pickups Tuesday. The regular schedule will be in effect by Thursday.

City Hall will be closed Monday because of the holiday. The Des Plaines branches of the Post Office will also be closed and no mail will be delivered. Service will resume Tuesday.

Des Plaines man slugged, robbed

A Des Plaines man was robbed of $40 in cash early yesterday in the parking lot of a local doughnut shop by a man who struck him and took money from his pocket, police said.

Frank Bell, 26, a cabdriver for Parkside Taxi Co., of Rosemont told police he had pulled his cab into the Dunkin' Donuts, 850 S. Elmhurst Rd., about 5 a.m. According to reports, another man approached Bell as he got out of the cab and struck him, knocking Bell to the ground.

The man then fled. Bell noticed the $40 missing from his shirt pocket which had been ripped by the attacker, said police.

Ecuador—culture shock for Carole

by LINDA PUNCH

Eighteen-year-old Carole Shekorian could write a book on "How I Spent My Summer Vacation."

As a foreign exchange student to Loja, Ecuador, the Des Plaines student spent the summer months immersed in a culture that considers cooked guinea pig a delicacy and large families the norm.

Carole's experience began last spring when she applied to be a summer participant in the American Field Services foreign exchange program. After a grueling round of interviews and meetings, she was selected from 13 applicants to spend the summer in the small South American country.

"I KNEW VERY little about Ecuador," Carole said. "I knew it was in South America and that the people spoke Spanish — that was about it."

Although Carole combed the libraries for information on Ecuador, she still wasn't prepared for what she found.

"I didn't know what to expect. Somehow the books didn't get right at it. They told the history of the country and that bananas were its biggest export," she said.

Learning to live with a family of 12 proved almost as much of a cultural shock to Carole as a strange language and lower standard of living.

"It was really a big change — in a big family there's always so much to do," Carole said. "It's the first time I had sisters and an older brother."

THE SOUTH Americans' lack of concern for the political goings-on of the United States also surprised the Maine West High School senior.

"They kind of keep track of what's happening up here but U.S. politics aren't so important to them," she said. "I noticed little things in the paper about Watergate but that's about it."

"They weren't as aware of the United States — they had heard of Los Angeles and New York and they knew Chicago was someplace in the middle," she added.

Even local politics had little effect on the Ecuadorians, according to Carole.

"They have a kind of 'so-what' attitude towards government. It exists but it really doesn't affect them," she said. "The people seem to be kind of separate from government."

Carole said Ecuadorians are "more concerned with each other" than Americans are.

"THEY WERE SO friendly and so nice — they really wanted to make a good impression," she said. "You couldn't walk into a house without being offered something to eat."

One of Carole's more memorable moments came when her Ecuadorian family took her to a restaurant for roast guinea pig.

"My family was trying to get across to me what it was — finally it dawned on me," she said. "It was quite a bit of meat and a lot of bones. Somebody said it tastes like rabbit."

Carole reciprocated the dinner by preparing French toast for her family and friends.

"AS FAR AS I can tell, they either liked it, were very polite or very hungry," she said.

Carole returned to the United States 15 pounds heavier and loaded down with souvenirs.

"I got very used to talking in Spanish," she said. "It was kind of a cultural shock coming back here."

accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.

Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.

"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.

Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

Stan Dale at Maine South

Stan Dale, former Chicago radio personality, will open MONACEP's Psychological Challenges of Modern Living Series at Maine South High School, 1111 S. Dear Rd., Park Ridge, Oct. 9, at 8 p.m.

Subject of the lecture is "Sex is a Three Letter Word." Dale, a practicing transactional analyst, will explain some of the meanings that Americans have put behind the small but significant word "sex."

The theme of the series is "... In the Pursuit of Happiness." Three additional lectures are planned for the fall term. They include lectures on Parent Effectiveness Training by Dr. Michael Jacobson on Nov. 13; transactional analysis used in communication among people by Dr. Larry Kottelenberg on Dec. 11; and a psychodrama on single parenthood on Jan. 8, with the Des Plaines Theatre Guild and Rivka Green.

This series is cosponsored by Forest Hospital Foundation of Des Plaines and MONACEP.

Season tickets for the four-program series are $5. Single admission is $1.50. Senior citizens, 60 years of age and residents of the Oakton Community College district, may purchase season tickets or single admission tickets at half price. Tickets are available through mail from MONACEP offices or at the following locations: Dolmar Pharmacy, Morton Grove; Oakton Drugs, Skokie; Rencor Pharmacy, Glenview; Scharringhaus Pharmacy, Park Ridge; and White Oak Drugs, Des Plaines.

Union's sincerity questioned

The Dist. 63 school board questioned the "sincerity and good faith" of the East Maine Education Association (EMEA) in a letter to the teacher union's president last week.

In a letter dated Sept. 28, board Pres. Irene Luck said the board wished to express "our profound disappointment concerning the EMEA's unilateral action of breaking off negotiations."

"That you should exercise such arbitrary action without affording the board's negotiating team the opportunity of speaking to the issues under discussion raises serious questions with the board concerning the sincerity and good faith of the EMEA," she wrote.

The teacher's union broke off contract negotiations last week after the Dist. 63 board refused to give a written commitment that a board member be present at all sessions, EMEA Pres. Henry O'Neill said teachers view a professional negotiator hired by the board as "cutting off our last real contact with the board."

Mrs. Luck said the "picketing efforts" of nearly 190 teachers attending the last negotiation session was "an attempt to create an atmosphere of intimidation and threat."

The board can neither condone nor accept the "EMEA's demand ... to determine the membership of the board of education's negotiating team as a condition of further negotiations," she said.

"The board is not interested in engaging in games and bad faith activities that cannot possibly result in the best interests of the children, teachers and parents of Dist. 63," Mrs. Luck said.

The school board president reiterated the board's willingness to continue negotiations.

Three cameras worth $465 stolen from car

Thieves stole three cameras valued at $465 from a car owned by a local man, according to Cook County Sheriff's Police.

The victim, Stuart Burger, 10104 Holly Ln., told police he saw two youths running from the car with cameras while he was preparing to move his belongings to a new apartment Thursday.

Sheriff's police said the thieves fled the scene in a red and black late model Chevrolet. One of the youths was described only as in his early 20's with a medium build. His partner was described as in his late 20's with light-colored hair and wearing purple and white striped pants.

Sheriff's investigators were probing leads into the theft Friday.

Friend thinks Chile holding area man

by STEVE BROWN

"It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released."

The words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank R. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.

In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.

"I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said.

In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.

Officially the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing."

Now the state department has withdrawn that report.

Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."

A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.

"Frank never made any bones about his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 26, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.

"All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.

HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.

Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Franks told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

Maryville decision expected tonight

A decision is expected tonight by the Dist. 26 School Board on the site for the new Maryville School.

The board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The citizens' committee, charged to study possible sites for the school will make its recommendation to the school board at the meeting.

Lloyd Demel, school board president, last week said the board plans to make a final decision on the site tonight. Several weeks ago the board voted to build the school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the River Trails Junior High School site.

But residents of the district were unhappy with that plan and prompted the creation of the citizens' committee to study alternative locations.

Demel had indicated the school board may reverse its earlier decision after considering the citizens' committee recommendation.

"Unfortunately, we have been caught in the middle of quickly increasing construction cost situation and we feel the government will take this into consideration," he said.

Walchirk said he has no idea how quickly HUD will review the new request, but said the CCHA has a 90-day limit on the bids that were received.

Bids were opened Sept. 6 and the CCHA had three months in which to take action. The CCHA has delayed action pending the HUD decision.

Low bid on the nine story building was submitted by the Corbetta Construction Co. of Des Plaines. The company bid $2,326,000 to build the facility.

BEFORE THE BIDS were opened, Walchirk said the project could be completed by next summer, but since the funding complications have arisen, he has refused to comment on when the facility might be finished.

Once completed, the facility will be open to persons 62 years of age or older. Income and assets are also criterion for residency. Newly revised guidelines will allow single persons with an annual income of $4,900 or married couples with an income of $5,300 to reside in the facility.

The city has adopted a resolution giving Des Plaines residents preference over nonresidents in being considered for the building.

Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) will provide extra money.

The Herald learned recently that the local HUD officials believe the size of the proposed 129-unit building might have to be reduced to bring it within budget guidelines. The HUD officials said that current funds for such projects have been frozen and it is highly unlikely additional money can be obtained.

"I think we will be able to receive a reasonably quick answer from HUD for our new request," Walchirk explained. He also predicted the government will provide the CCHA with additional funds to complete the project.

"THERE ARE NO frills or overdesign in this project. We have between 400 and 500 applications for this project and we believe that there is a real need for the housing in Des Plaines," Walchirk added.

Scouting news

Devonshire Troop 263, under Senior Patrol Leader Terry Wright and assistant David Brettman have started a new year of scouting with four patrols.

The senior patrol — patrol leader Terry Wright, David Brettman, Ken Skiff, Gary Bowman and Bill Whelan.

Splitting cobras — Patrol leader Tom Skiff, Andy Porto, Ted Petrik, Steve Haas and Brian Kliment.

Scout master Gene Wright and assistant scout master Frank Carbonare will have the assistance of camping chairman Bob Bowman, publicity Ray Whelan and the advancement chairman Tom Petrik.

A fall camporee is planned for October at Camp Lakota. The theme will be physical fitness.

Boy Scout Pack 63 will begin the annual candy sale Friday. Cubs and boy scouts will sell candy through Oct. 14.

Boys are asked to pick up boxes of candy at their den leaders home after school on Friday.

Proceeds from the sale will go to support scouting activities, buy reference books for leaders, pay for awards and achievement badges for the boys, and for re-registration.

Boys will win prizes depending on the amount of candy they sell. Prizes include sleeping bags, ice skates, cameras, rods and reels, models, sporting equipment, crystal sets and pens and pencils.

Boxes of candy sell for $1 each.

Committee chairmen and leaders have been named for Pack 63. They include: Phil Bock, committee chairman; Don Murray, treasurer; Earl Cleal, advancement; Ray Henderson, parent contact; Hank Pohlman and Pat Gillespie, activities; Jim Blomquist, cubmaster; Fred Heinzman, assistant cubmaster; Loll Uh-navy, den leader coach; Peggy Hightower, Sue Tudor, Donna Roberts, Luana Pohlman and Mrs. Payuk, den leaders; and Hank Pohlman, Webelos leader.

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLECHIA

The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County, Chicago, west, and North Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Trustee Spees to urge vote on Devon-53 housing project

by FRED GACA

Village Trustee George Spees said he will attempt to have the board vote on the Devon-53 housing project question at tonight's meeting.

Spees said he agreed with the plan commission's recommendation to deny the zoning changes and annexation requested by the developers and he saw no reason to delay the issue.

He said, however, he had little chance for success in bringing the issue to vote because other members of the village board have said they want more time to review the commission's recommendation and other information related to the project.

VILLAGE PRES. Charles Zettek said, "To the best of my knowledge, the board has not had ample opportunity to review the supporting evidence and to sit down and talk about the issue."

Trustee Nanci Vanderweel said she did not expect the board to be ready to vote at tonight's meeting.

The board meets at 8 p.m. in the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave.

Mrs. Vanderweel said she wanted to know more about legal issues involved in the matter. She said she was also interested in meeting with the developers if they wanted to talk about the project.

SPEES SAID he was opposed to the 267-acre, 13,000-population development because of its high density of living units per acre and lower than village standards for open space. He said unless the developers were willing to lower density and raise the open space he saw no reason for continued study.

"What's the delay? What facts will be presented that we don't have yet?" said Spees.

According to Spees, the developers told the board in late November that the density of the project could "only be negotiated upward." He said the developers had no concern for the village, the residents or the project itself in demanding the high-density housing.

Robert DiLeonardi, attorney for the developers, has said the developers want to meet with the board to discuss the plan commission's recommendation against the project.

The developers, however, have not yet contacted the board.

Spees said if the developers want to talk to the board, "Then they better be coming down."

AT THE MEETING last week, the board directed Village Atty. Edward Hofer to study the possibility of the village asking the county to withdraw its zoning for part of the project. The zoning, granted by the county over the opposition of the village, permits the construction of a high-density apartment complex.

The zoning has been granted for about 77 acres of property.

Spees said the possibility that the developers may build on the county-zoned land was "not as great a problem as the entire project." He said even if the land now zoned was fully developed, the impact would not be that great on the village.

He said he was more concerned that the village oppose the request for the entire project because a high-density development for 267 acres of land would have a serious impact on the village.

Spees said he did not believe the county would grant high-density zoning for the remaining land in the project because the county zoning board had "matured" in recent years and was more aware of planning needs.

DEVON-53 IS a planned unit development of single-family homes, quadruminums, apartment buildings and commercial businesses that would be built on three large sections of land near Devon Avenue and Ill. Rte. 53. The developers are asking for variations in village ordinances to permit construction of the project.

The village plan commission has recommended rejection of the project. The village board must take the final action on the developers request.

Jaycees' Fallfest a disaster

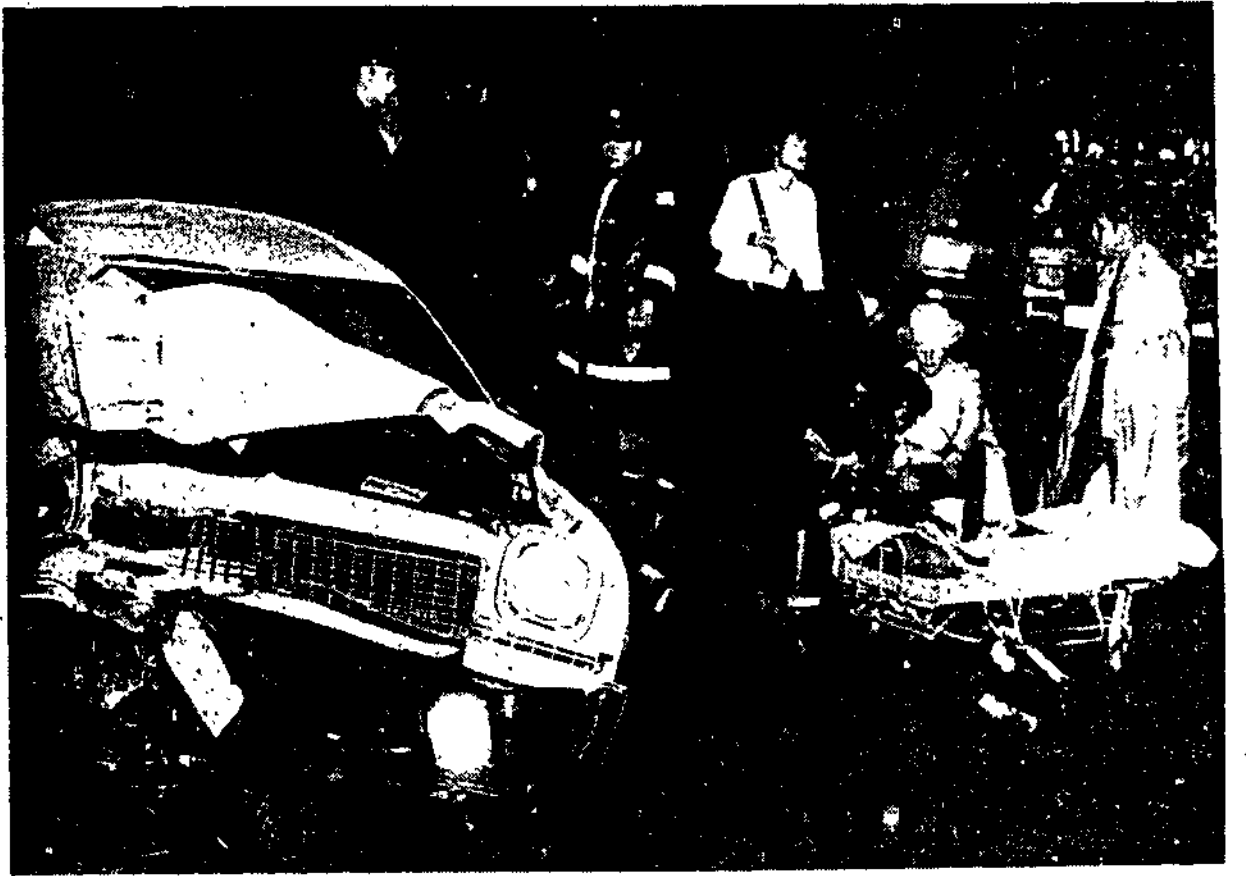

The Elk Grove Village Jaycees' Fallfest was bad, but could have been worse, according to Club Pres. Ralph Hogan.

Poor weather for the weekend festival kept people away and the club lost approximately $2,000 on the event.

Hogan said the loss would have been greater if the club members had not gone through the village on Sunday encouraging people to attend.

He said the club began wholesale selling of food to residents late Sunday so the food would not be left over.

On Saturday, the club collected about

CD unit ready to serve

by FRED GACA

In any emergency or disaster, from a tornado to an airplane crash, one service is vital to need to bring order out of chaos — communications.

Unless fast, efficient communications can be established, rescue efforts will be hampered by a lack of coordination and direction.

For Elk Grove Village, the 14-member Civil Defense radio group stands ready to provide the emergency communication whenever and wherever needed, as soon as they are called out.

Clark Fulton, who is in charge of the communications operation, said the Civil Defense unit was a logical outgrowth of the Elk Grove Amateur Radio Club.

THE CLUB IS made up of residents who are amateur radio operators (hams). Fulton said shortly after the club was formed in the mid-1960s, the members approached the village to offer their services in an emergency.

The village accepted the club's offer and the communications branch of the village's Civil Defense program became a reality.

A communication center is now operational in the basement of the headquarters fire station on Bleisler Road. The center contains radio equipment which can connect the village to, literally, any point in the world.

A communications network has been established for the Chicago metropolitan area and northern Illinois. Through the network, the village can either receive help from or offer assistance to any neighboring area.

THE CENTER also contains a 24-hour teletype connected to the national weather service. When a severe weather alert is received over the teletype, the on-duty fireman will notify the radio club.

The first club member notified generally goes to a watch position at the top of Alexian Brothers Medical Center. The second member goes to the emergency communications center; other members go to assigned locations throughout the village.

With a combination of mobile units in their cars and walkie-talkies, the club can literally blanket the village with observers.

WEATHER WATCHES are called about once a month — generally for tornadoes, thunderstorms and possible flooding. The club maintains their observers during the entire weather watch.

Fulton said if a tornado or flooding were to strike, the club would then provide communications needed by the police, fire and other rescue departments. He said club members were not trained for actual rescue work, but would assist in any manner they were directed to.

The club is now developing emergency procedures to handle an airplane crash, major fire and other disasters. In these emergencies, the club could, in addition to providing communications, serve as an auxiliary police force. They would barricade streets, direct traffic and control crowds.

Club members now operate the Salvation Army canteen truck, stored at the fire department's Greenleaf Avenue station. At a major fire, the canteen is taken to the scene to offer food, beverages and dry clothing to firemen.

THE CANTEN was also used last year to bring food to residents of the Elk Grove Mobile Home Park who were evacuated to Elk Grove High School after their homes were flooded.

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $3 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "Dies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Third quarter ends Oct. 13.

Units needed: 102

Units donated: 136

Third quarter donations may be given Saturday at Alexian Brothers Medical Center. For appointments, call the hospital at 437-5500.

A special village blood drive will be on Oct. 13 to start donations for the fourth quarter. The drive will be at the headquarters fire station, next to the village hall, 901 Wellington Ave. For appointments, call Trustee Nanci Vanderweel at 439-3900.

Elk Grove Village requires 900 units of blood donated yearly in order to guarantee free blood replacement for all residents. The village could be dropped from the program if it fails to meet its quota.

'I knew I had done nothing wrong'

by AL MEISSERSCHMIDT

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $100,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence. About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 466 shares of stock in the bank between 1965 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Filiecki.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stockholders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."

"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.

Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.

Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.

"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.

Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

chase radio equipment, but no club member has ever been paid for his work.

To prepare for possible disasters, Fulton said the club holds regular training sessions. Members practice emergency radio procedures, test effective ranges of various equipment and learn where the "dead spots" are in the village.

The dead spots are places where radio communications are poor. Among these spots are areas in the Ned Brown Forest Preserve with its tall trees and the inside of industrial park buildings which have a large steel framework supporting the buildings.

The club will work with other civil defense units and municipal rescue squads in a downed aircraft practice. The practice will simulate an airplane crash in the Northwest suburbs.

Rescue techniques, communications systems and transportation of injured persons will be tested in the practice.

Friend believes Chilean military holding area man

by STEVE BROWN

"It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released."

The words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank R. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.

In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.

"I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said. In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.

Officially the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing." Now the state department has withdrawn that report.

Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."

A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.

"Frank never made any bones about his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 26, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.

"All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.

HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.

Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Frank, told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

Registration at park hits all-time high

Registration for the coming season at the Elk Grove Park District has hit an all-time high of more than 1,900, up almost 400 from last year and 600 from 1971.

"About another 400 have already signed up for second session programs which start in January," said Rich Ludovissy, superintendent of recreation, "so we've signed up a total of more than 2,300 people."

That figure, according to Ludovissy, doesn't reflect the hundreds of people who participate in set programs every week, such as swimming, open gyms or roller skating.

About 100 people are on the waiting list due to closed programs, according to Ludovissy. Thirty-eight people are on the waiting list for acrobatics.

SOME OF THE more popular programs this year are family hayrides, housewives rest and relaxation and dance classes. At least 182 signed up for the hayrides which had a limit of 200 participants. About 188 signed up for dance classes which had a limit of 300.

Housewives rest and relaxation, one of the most popular offerings of the park district, has 212 women registered. The limit for the program is 300.

The housewives program offers trips at reduced costs. The first few trips to art shows or plays, are planned. After that, the participants in the program help decide where they'll be going.

Other popular classes which are filled are: evening crafts beginning boys judo, beginning boys karate, girls judo, couples volleyball, beginning bridge, slim and trim, first aid and women's volleyball.

THE PRESCHOOL and nursery programs again filled up quickly with all 115 openings taken.

There are still hundreds of openings in other park district programs, according to Ludovissy. Registration is still going on at the park district office, 499 Biesterfeld Rd. Information on programs and cost can be obtained by calling 437-8780.

Office machines stolen in plant burglary

The office of the lamp division of ITT, 1855 Greenleaf Ave. was burglarized Sunday night of $500 worth of office machines.

The theft was discovered by a cleaning man who noticed the typewriters in the office were missing.

According to Elk Grove Village police, the building was entered through a broken window. In addition to several adding machines, a calculator was also taken.

Youth hurt as cycle runs into rope

John Franch, 17, of 56 Walpole Rd., was slightly injured last week when he struck a rope strung across the street at 1016 Brantwood Ave. while riding his motorcycle.

Franch had rope burns on his neck, but did not require medical treatment according to Elk Grove Village police. Franch did not know who put up the rope.

Ohio University band to perform at school

The Ohio University Marching Band will perform at Elk Grove High School during the half-time of the Elk Grove and Prospect football game Friday.

The band is ranked as one of the leaders in the Midwest, having performed for the Pittsburgh Steelers and other professional football teams. Their performance will follow a special marching show by the Elk Grove High School Marching Band.

Grease fire victim in fair condition

Betty Kolarik, 49, of 487 Corinthia Dr., is in fair condition at Alexian Brothers Medical Center after being burned in a grease fire at her home.

Her husband, Frank, 56, was treated and released for burns at the hospital.

According to the Elk Grove Village fire department, the Kolariks were burned Sunday evening when grease splattered and caught fire at their home. The fire was extinguished when firemen arrived, but the damage to the house was estimated at $1,000.

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLECHIA

The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Federal mediation brought in

Drivers' wildcat strike means no garbage service

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbage men back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "bickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $3.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbage men at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

Motorists may be slowed down

Speed limits of 25 miles per hour through residential areas are being proposed by Village Pres. Wendell E. Jones.

"We have studied and tested a number of areas in the village, most recently and in depth in Hunting Ridge, and have found that 25-mile-per-hour speed limits are warranted in most cases," said Jones. "I believe this speed limit should be the rule, rather than the exception."

Jones said he would ask the village traffic and safety committee, the police department, village manager and village attorney to draw up a plan curtailing speed limits to 25 miles an hour on residential streets.

"Major arterial streets will, of necessity, remain higher but residential subdivision streets would all be reduced to 25 miles per hour," said Jones.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeput out for pickup yesterday morning were all still there at day's end as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois, Inc., one of the Northwest suburbs' largest owners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Third of teachers moonlight 'for living'

One third of all Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 teachers have to moonlight just to make ends meet, according to a leaflet passed out by teachers in area shopping centers.

The leaflets, which protest the lack of a wage settlement and the allegedly low salaries were passed out over the weekend. About 20,000 were distributed, according to George Sherman, head of the Classroom Teachers' Council (CTC) which represents 97 per cent of the teaching staff.

A survey recently conducted by the CTC asked teachers if they had to moonlight during the school year. One third answered yes, Sherman said.

The one page leaflet also said: "We received a superior rating by the state evaluating team in spring, 1973. However, the school board is not willing to pay for this quality education that your children receive."

"We cannot give your children our all when one third of us are forced to moonlight to supplement our salaries."

"For years, our salary schedule has been among the lowest in the entire area."

"The reaction from the public was tremendously overwhelming," said Sherman of the weekend's "informational picketing." He said the public, for the most part, supported the teachers and asked how they could help.

HE SAID THE teachers told the residents to contact the school board members and make their feelings known.

Of two school board members contacted yesterday, neither had received any calls from residents, they said.

Board member Joel Meyer said he had received two calls from parents who "weren't too happy about seeing teachers leafletting" but that neither supported the teachers.

He added that he thought salaries in the district were generally comparable to surrounding districts. Beginning teachers in Dist. 15 with a bachelor's degree received $7,730 last year while beginning teachers in surrounding districts will be getting $8,200 this year, according to CTC negotiator George Yingst.

Until a wage settlement is reached, teachers will be receiving the same salaries they got last year. The board recently offered a temporary 6 per cent increase, but this was refused by teacher negotiators who said they wanted to settle the salary question in one package.

THE RAISES WILL be retroactive from the beginning of the school year, according to board negotiator Walt Sundling.

Teachers are asking for a total increase of $536,790 from last year's salaries. No figures of how the wage raises will be distributed are available. The board's latest offer was $152,000 under the teacher demand.

Another drug arrest in Community Park

The third drug arrest in less than two weeks at Palatine's Community Park occurred Sunday night.

Joseph Christenbury, 17, of 636 Allen Ln., Arlington Heights, was arrested for possession of approximately 102 grams of marijuana at 7:50 p.m. Sunday. Palatine Patrolman Jack Byrnes reported that he saw the marijuana on the dashboard of Christenbury's car and made the arrest.

Christenbury is scheduled for an Oct. 11 hearing in the Arlington Heights branch of Cook County Circuit Court at 1:30 p.m.

Patrols in the park were stepped up during the past month, when motorcycle police began regular watches in the parks.

High Court rules against parochial

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $5 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Library vote tentatively set Nov. 6

The $1.3 million building referendum for a new Palatine Public Library is tentatively set for Nov. 6, pending final action by village trustees next week.

Details of the building were presented by the library board's architect, financial consultant and attorney during a joint meeting with village trustees last night. The final referendum date will be decided next Tuesday. The vote must come within 30 days after the village board calls for the election.

If approved, the building referendum would add an average of $7.95 per year to the tax bill of Palatine residents with homes assessed at $11,500.

Financial consultant Ronald V. Norens told library officials that the successful referendum would add 6.9 cents per $100 assessed valuation to the tax rate. Homes assessed at $10,500 would be taxed an additional $7.23, while homeowners with a $14,000 assessed valuation would pay a yearly tax bill of $9.66 for the new library.

THE PROPOSED LIBRARY would be constructed on a 1.67-acre site on the southwest corner of Northwest Highway and Benton Street, with the building fronting on Benton. The two-story structure would cost an estimated $33 per square foot and would be approximately three-fourths the size of the Arlington Heights library.

During the village board meeting last night following the special meeting with library officials, trustees voted unanimously to give the library board title to the library's current site at 149 N. Brockway St. The village has held the title since the late 1950's when voters passed the last successful referendum. Money from the sale of the property would have to be used for library purposes by either the village or library board.

Part of last night's discussion centered on the issue of the Palatine library's, currently a branch of the village government, eventually becoming a district library that could include Inverness and unincorporated residents. Library board members have approved the concept of the district, but have made no definite plans to move toward actually becoming a district.

IF THE PROPOSED district includes an area outside the existing library boundaries, the voters will be divided into two groups: the residents in the original boundaries and those that would be taken into the district.

According to Library Atty. R. Marlin Smith, a majority of voters in both groups must approve the district before the library board can adopt it.

Village trustees were enthusiastic about the library board's referendum proposal, calling it "not in any way extravagant," and "100 per cent better" than the unsuccessful referendums rejected five years ago.

Fulle, others exonerated in bank stock 'conflict'

by AL MESSEUSCHMIDT
Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $180,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.

About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 466 shares of stock in the bank between 1966 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Ffieski.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stock holders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."

"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.

Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.

Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.

"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.

Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

before the end of the week, according to Kiwanis member Ronald Hunter. Here, Jerry Onyskiw takes in another donation from a motorist in downtown Palatine.

Village approves funds to keep band

The Palatine Village Board has agreed to appropriate $1,000 for the financially-troubled Palatine Village Band in return for a commitment from the band to stay in Palatine.

Glen Stevenson, band treasurer, indicated band members felt they could raise enough funds on their own to match the village's appropriation and continue to operate in Palatine. The band also received a $1,000 appropriation from the Palatine Park District.

The $1,000 village appropriation will be included in the 1974 fiscal budget, now being prepared by acting village manager James Bennett.

The village board had helped organize the village band in 1958, and had appropriated $2,000 to the band each year until two years ago. The village board also financed the $30,000 band shell in Palatine.

SPOKESMEN FOR the band had indicated the band would like to remain in Palatine, but might be forced to look to other municipalities if funding was not forthcoming. Band members had informal contact with Schaumburg, Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows officials about funding, but no firm offers had been made.

The band's budget is used to pay the conductor, purchase and maintain equipment and instruments and obtain sheet music.

The band puts on approximately ten free weekly summer outdoor concerts and one winter concert each year within the village limits. Additional concerts are played in other municipalities for a fee of approximately $100.

U.S. subpoenas Wheeling Village Board records

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Board records for the past five years have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged building and zoning shakedowns in that village yesterday.

A Herald reporter was present Friday when a federal agent arrived at the Wheeling Village Hall to serve the subpoena on Village Mgr. George Passoli.

It was learned yesterday that the document served on the village manager was a subpoena for board records. Passoli refused to comment, noting that grand jury proceedings are secret.

Other village officials contacted yesterday also declined to comment on the subpoena or even confirm that board records had been subpoenaed. "If there's any announcement of that magnitude, I think it should come from the village manager," said Trustee John Koeppen.

Only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said specifically that he knew nothing about the subpoenaed records. He said he knew village building and zoning records had been subpoenaed earlier this year, but said he had not been informed of the new subpoena.

Likewise, federal officials connected with the investigation said they could make no comment on the matter.

THE VILLAGE BOARD records are the latest documents to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury. Early this summer, several cartons of village building and zoning records were turned over to the grand jury, which has been hearing testimony for several months.

The investigation by U.S. Atty. James Thompson's office is focused on reports of payoffs by developers to obtain village approval of such things as annexation, zoning, subdivision plans and water and sewer lines.

Targets of the federal grand jury probe include certain present or former village officials as well as others suspected of violating the Hobbs Act by using extortion and bribery to interfere with interstate commerce.

The Wheeling case is also expected to make use of a large number of witnesses, many of them developers of major Wheeling projects built in the past five years. Some of these developers, subpoenaed by the grand jury, have been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

ONE SOURCE close to the grand jury proceedings indicated to the Herald yesterday that at least one aspect of the federal inquiry is the manner in which elections are conducted. Witnesses before the grand jury were asked how elections are run in Wheeling, how candidates are selected and what causes individuals to either seek public office or, once elected, to remain in public office.

Although government inquiry into election procedures in Wheeling was not considered the purpose of the original investigation, illegal election practices would be legitimate grounds for federal agents to pursue. Violations of election law could also violate federal statutes.

Christmas Seal campaign

Mrs. Robert Leonard, 642 McArthur Dr., Palatine, will head the local 1973 Christmas Seal campaign. The campaign goal this year for the metropolitan Chicago region is $1,125,000.

The Christmas Seal campaign will be conducted in November and December. Funds raised in the drive go to support Chicago-area programs for the detection and diagnosis of tuberculosis, educational programs on lung diseases, campaigns to combat cigarette smoking and air pollution, and to support the American Lung Association.

CANS WERE IN ABUNDANCE but there was less glass and paper than expected last Saturday as Palatine residents got back in the habit of recycling their garbage. Members of United Air Lines Air Explorers manned the recycling center, unloading residents' cars and sorting the garbage. Above (from left) Alan Ahr, Kevin Nowlin and Paul Nus sort the different colors of glass into bins. The recycling center at Northwest Highway and Smith Street will be open from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. on the second and fourth Saturday of every month.

Hoffman Estates to vote on Westbury

by NANCY COWGER

The Hoffman Estates Village Board will vote Monday on the proposed 4,372-unit Westbury development.

U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson yesterday extended the deadline for conclusion of negotiations on the project until 2 p.m. Oct. 9.

He was assured by attorneys for the village and Meridian Housing Corp. there remained "no substantial impediments to a successful outcome."

Attorneys are now seeking to reach compromises on 54 suggested changes in Meridian's proposal to the village. The changes were recommended by a joint panel of the village's plan commission and zoning board of appeals.

AGREEMENT HAS been reached on many points, the attorneys said. Although they were not specific some progress was noted by Mayor Virginia Hayter.

Meridian has agreed to install a traffic signal light at the intersection of Palatine and Elm roads and general agreement was reached on expansion of storm water retention areas, according to Mayor Hayter. She did not detail the retention compromise.

Last night at the village board meeting she said negotiations are still under way on a requested improvement and addition to Freeman Boulevard along the eastern edge of the village.

Meridian apparently has not agreed to underground installation of utility lines.

Village attorney Edward Hofert revealed Commonwealth Edison Co. has estimated it would need an extra $135,000 for underground electrical lines and said "the developer protested."

HOFERT TOLD trustees they will receive Wednesday or Thursday a written analysis of which of the 54 points have been settled and which have not.

He will indicate the position of the developer on points where there has been no accord. The trustees are to have this analysis for review prior to Monday's meeting.

Last night Mayor Hayter summarized what she saw as pros and cons if the development is approved. She also noted the village has spent $60,000 in the past four years, up to last July 1, in attempts to resolve lawsuits focusing on the property.

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLECHA

The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 187,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Distribute leaflets telling 'plight'

One third of teachers claim they moonlight 'for living'

One third of all Palatine-Rolling Meadows Dist. 15 teachers have to moonlight just to make ends meet, according to a leaflet passed out by teachers in area shopping centers.

The leaflets, which protest the lack of a wage settlement and the allegedly low salaries were passed out over the weekend. About 20,000 were distributed, according to George Sherman, head of the Classroom Teachers' Council (CTC) which represents 97 per cent of the teaching staff.

A survey recently conducted by the CTC asked teachers if they had to moonlight during the school year. One third answered yes, Sherman said.

The one page leaflet also said: "We received a superior rating by the state evaluating team in spring, 1973. However, the school board is not willing to pay for this quality education that your children receive."

"We cannot give your children our all when one third of us are forced to moonlight to supplement our salaries."

"For years, our salary schedule has been among the lowest in the entire area."

"The reaction from the public was tremendously overwhelming," said Sherman of the weekend's "informational picketing." He said the public, for the most part, supported the teachers and asked how they could help.

HE SAID THE teachers told the residents to contact the school board members and make their feelings known.

Of two school board members contacted yesterday, neither had received any calls from residents, they said.

Board member Joel Meyer said he had received two calls from parents who "weren't too happy about seeing teachers leafletting," but that neither supported the teachers.

He added that he thought salaries in the district were generally comparable to surrounding districts. Beginning teachers in Dist. 15 with a bachelor's degree received $7,730 last year while beginning teachers in surrounding districts will be getting $8,200 this year, according to CTC negotiator George Yingst.

Until a wage settlement is reached, teachers will be receiving the same salaries they got last year. The board recently offered a temporary 6 per cent increase, but this was refused by teacher negotiators who said they wanted to settle the salary question in one package.

THE RAISES WILL be retroactive from the beginning of the school year, according to board negotiator Walt Sundling.

Teachers are asking for a total increase of $338,780 from last year's salaries. No figures of how the wage raises will be distributed are available. The board's latest offer was $152,000 under the teacher demand.

703 tons of junk over 2-year period

More than 703 tons of junk have made Rolling Meadows' recycling, ecology, and beautification (REB) committee's second birthday a happy one.

The figure represents the amount of trash that has been collected by the REB committee in the two years it has been organized. The committee marked its second "birthday" last month.

In the two years the committee has collected a total of 1,408,160 pounds of materials, including 374,010 pounds of glass, 908,780 pounds of newspaper, and 123,370 pounds of cans, according to committee chairman Evelyn Drummond.

Regular recycling will take place again this Saturday at the public works building, 3200 Central Rd. Hours are 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Contributors will be eligible for a bicycle drawing which will be held on the third Saturday of the month.

TAKING A TUMBLE is part of the new children's tumbling class offered through the Rolling Meadows Park District this fall. Instructor Al Gallata helps a student fall over his first hurdle, a rolled up mat. Muscle coordination is the objective of this course which is offered every Saturday morning at Rolling Meadows High School. Classes started last week, but registration is still open.

City rocked by noise from concerts

Residents of Rolling Meadows apparently bore the brunt of sound fallout from the outdoor concerts at Arlington Park Race Track last weekend.

Arlington Heights police report 17 telephone complaints about noise from the concert Friday night, 16 of them coming from Rolling Meadows.

Rolling Meadows police said they received several complaints.

Sound measurements taken directly across from the outdoor stage on the north side of Wilke Road indicated that noise from the concert Friday night was negligible, according to Frank Charlton, Arlington Heights health director.

BUT FURTHER south in Rolling Meadows, complaining residents said the music was loud enough to be a nuisance.

"I got quite a few calls," Ald. Thomas Waldron (2nd) said yesterday. The 2nd Ward is directly south of the race track. Waldron said he received "six or seven" calls Friday night and he called the Arlington Heights police department to complain.

"But it certainly didn't do any good because it was just as loud Sunday night," Waldron said. "That was the loudest thing I ever heard."

Waldron said he tried calling the 24-hour number of the state noise pollution department, but got only a recorded message. He said he planned to bring the matter up at the city council meeting next week.

The 2nd Ward's other alderman, William Ahrens, said he received no calls but added "I was surprised because the minute I stepped out of my door Saturday night I expected to get calls."

One possible explanation for the apparent difference in sound levels between Arlington Heights and Rolling Meadows is that the race track grand stand reflected the music over Wilke Road into the residential area.

Arlington Heights Police Capt. Maurice English said the sound level was lowered for Saturday night's concert in an effort to cut down the noise. No complaints were logged either Saturday or Sunday, he said.

The outdoor concerts were sponsored by Pacific Stereo in conjunction with an exhibit of high fidelity equipment. Damp weather kept crowds at the concerts and weekend show far below original expectations.

High Court rules against parochialism

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $3 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overruled a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "Giles in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Well done!

Clearbrook director awaits new challenge

by TONI GINETTI

"When I first came to Clearbrook in 1964, we were in the basement of the First Presbyterian Church in Arlington Heights," Byrn Witt recalled. "My office was in a stairwell. We had about 15 students and no teachers."

Nearly 10 years later, the 40-year-old director of the Clearbrook Center for the retarded in Rolling Meadows sat quietly in his office recalling his work with the center, which will come to an end this year.

Witt will be leaving the center late this year to assume another position in the field of mental retardation. He has not yet made public his new position. The move is one Witt says he has contemplated for some time, but one he will make with some reluctance.

"I HAVE MIXED feelings about leaving. I feel very close to Clearbrook, and I have many personal ties to it. It's been very difficult to cut the cord. But I think I'm more suited for an institution in a period of growth and development. Clearbrook is established."

Overseeing Clearbrook's growth in the past decade has been one of Witt's personally satisfying achievements, he says. Since he joined the center, its budget has increased from $30,000 to just under $1 million.

Part of the increase is due to the expanded role of government funding in the area of retardation, according to Witt. "Up until 1964, this was totally funded by the community. That was the first year we got state funding. Since then, the amounts have gone up significantly each year. The community still gives about 15 per cent, which is important because we can't get state money until we have some community funding."

BUT MORE THAN funding policy changes have occurred at Clearbrook, Witt says. Program quality has been upgraded to a great extent by the efforts of schools, the community, and the state Department of Mental Health, he says.

"There have been changes in services and attitudes in the community. Clearbrook was set up by parents and it reflected the needs of the community. It still reflects the needs of the community but programs have shifted and we are now serving more adolescents, physically handicapped, and moderately retarded individuals."

Perhaps the greatest change has come in the general recognition of the retarded as educable, productive individuals, Witt says.

"More has happened in the last ten years in the area of retardation than in the last 300 years," says Witt, a speech and language therapist with the Chicago Public Schools and director of the South-west School for the Mentally Retarded before coming to Clearbrook. "I was in the audience when John Kennedy signed the first bills dealing with mental retardation.

"TEN YEARS AGO people thought the retarded had short life expectancies and were untrainable. Now we know the majority can be rehabilitated and belong in the community. We really have underestimated the abilities of the retarded. We have people on jobs now that five years ago we didn't think could ever hold jobs."

In reflecting on his work at the center, Witt speaks of both programs he has helped develop and individuals with whom he has worked.

He cites the center's vocational rehabilitation center in Elk Grove and the new live-in center in Arlington Heights for mildly and moderately retarded adults as programs "that I feel very proud of." Parents "who broke their backs" working with the center are among those he recognizes as well as Clearbrook "graduates" like the man from Elgin State Hospital who was considered unemployable when he came to Clearbrook several years ago and is now working in the community.

Administrative duties have lessened his contact with parents and students, but Witt hopes to renew that contact in his new position. "I got into the field because I was involved in the programs. That has been less and less now and I really miss that. But you can't keep the status quo in a place like Clearbrook."

Federal mediation brought in

Drivers' wildcat strike means no garbage service

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbage men back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "hickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vandervord, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $3.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by lo-

City unaffected by garbage strike

Residents of Rolling Meadows will not be affected by areawide garbage strikes. The city provides free garbage service to homeowners. The public works department collects residential trash. Some industrial and commercial establishments are also collected by the city for a fee. Most apartment and commercial establishments must pay for outside scavenger service and could be affected by strikes.

cal health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbage men at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeowners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Meadows recycling unit tells new hours

New hours have been announced for recycling at the Meadow Trace apartment complex in Rolling Meadows. The drive at the complex will be held on Thursdays from 2 to 7:30 p.m. beginning this week. Friday collection hours have been canceled.

Sandy Behr, coordinator of the complex's recycling drives, said the Friday hours were eliminated because most collection has occurred on Thursdays. Earlier hours will also enable more children to participate in the recycling collection, she said.

For persons who cannot participate in the Thursday recycling, Mrs. Behr said arrangements can be made to have materials picked up by calling 397-4124.

Residents will also be able to "rent" a child to assist in carrying materials to the recycling site, located behind the White Hen store in Meadows Square, Mrs. Behr said. Residents may pay children any amount they think is deserving. Each child will keep the money he or she collects, she said.

Participants in the recycling will be eligible for a $25 rent credit drawing from the apartment management. Two $5 coupons will also be awarded from the Triple R Discount store in Meadow Square.

'I knew I had done nothing wrong'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $100,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence. About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 460 shares of stock in the bank between 1966 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 28, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Filiecki.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stockholders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."

"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.

Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.

Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.

"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.

Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

would be legitimate grounds for federal agents to pursue. Violations of election law could also violate federal statutes.

Friend believes Chilean military holding area man

by STEVE BROWN

"It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released."

The words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank R. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.

In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.

"I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said. In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.

Officially, the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing." Now the state department has withdrawn that report.

Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."

A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.

"Frank never made any bones about his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 28, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.

"All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.

HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.

Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Franks told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

U.S. subpoenas Wheeling Village Board records

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Board records for the past five years have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged building and zoning shakedowns in that village yesterday.

A Herald reporter was present Friday when a federal agent arrived at the Wheeling Village Hall to serve the subpoena on Village Mgr. George Passolt.

It was learned yesterday that the document served on the village manager was a subpoena for board records. Passolt refused to comment, noting that grand jury proceedings are secret.

Other village officials contacted yesterday also declined to comment on the subpoena or even confirm that board records had been subpoenaed. "If there's any announcement of that magnitude, I think it should come from the village manager," said Trustee John Koepfen.

Only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said specifically that he knew nothing about the subpoenaed records. He said he knew village building and zoning records had been subpoenaed earlier this year, but said he had not been informed of the new subpoena.

Likewise, federal officials connected with the investigation said they could make no comment on the matter.

THE VILLAGE BOARD records are the latest documents to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury. Early this summer, several cartons of village building and zoning records were turned over to the grand jury, which has been hearing testimony for several months.

The investigation by U.S. Atty. James Thompson's office is focused on reports of payoffs by developers to obtain village approval of such things as annexation, zoning, subdivision plans and water and sewer lines.

Targets of the federal grand jury probe include certain present or former village officials as well as others suspected of violating the Hobbs Act by using extortion and bribery to interfere with interstate commerce.

The Wheeling case is also expected to make use of a large number of witnesses, many of them developers of major Wheeling projects built in the past five years. Some of these developers, subpoenaed by the grand jury, have been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

ONE SOURCE close to the grand jury proceedings indicated to the Herald yesterday that at least one aspect of the federal inquiry is the manner in which elections are conducted. Witnesses before the grand jury were asked how elections are run in Wheeling, how candidates are selected and what causes individuals to either seek public office or, once elected, to remain in public office.

Although government inquiry into election procedures in Wheeling was not considered the purpose of the original investigation, illegal election practices

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLECHIA

The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County, Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Federal mediation brought in

Drivers' wildcat strike means no garbage service

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbagemen back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "hickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $5.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbagemen at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage put out for pickup yesterday morning were all still there at day's end as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois, Inc., one of the Northwest suburbs' largest scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeowners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Deadline set by District Court judge

Village to decide Monday on Westbury

by NANCY COWGEN

The Hoffman Estates Village Board will vote Monday on the proposed 4,472-unit Westbury development.

U.S. District Court Judge Edwin Robson yesterday extended the deadline for conclusion of negotiations on the project until 2 p.m. Oct. 9.

He was assured by attorneys for the village and Meridian Housing Corp. there remained "no substantial impediments to a successful outcome."

Attorneys are now seeking to reach compromises on 54 suggested changes in Meridian's proposal to the village. The changes were recommended by a joint panel of the village's plan commission and zoning board of appeals.

AGREEMENT HAS been reached on many points, the attorneys said. Although they were not specific some progress was noted by Mayor Virginia Hayler.

Meridian has agreed to install a traffic signal light at the intersection of Palatine and Elm roads and general agreement was reached on expansion of storm water retention areas, according to Mayor Hayler. She did not detail the retention compromise.

Last night at the village board meeting she said negotiations are still under way on a requested improvement and addition to Freeman Boulevard along the eastern edge of the village.

Meridian apparently has not agreed to underground installation of utility lines. Village attorney Edward Hofert revealed Commonwealth Edison Co. has estimated it would need an extra $135,000 for underground electrical lines and said "the developer protested."

HOFERT TOLD trustees they will receive Wednesday or Thursday a written analysis of which of the 54 points have been settled and which have not. He will indicate the position of the developer on points where there has been no accord. The trustees are to have this analysis for review prior to Monday's meeting.

Last night Mayor Hayter summarized what she saw as pros and cons if the development is approved. She also noted the village has spent $60,000 in the past four years, up to last July 1, in attempts to resolve lawsuits focusing on the property.

PTAs to hear park referendum plans

Schaumburg Park District officials will present details of a $2.5 million park development referendum to the Collins School Parent-Teachers Association tonight and the Sheffield Manor Homeowners Association tomorrow.

The PTA meeting will be held at 8 p.m. at Collins School, 407 S. Summit Dr., Schaumburg. The other presentation will be made at 8 p.m. tomorrow at the Sheffield Manor model home, 613 Burgess Court.

The referendum, which will be held Oct. 13, will be divided into two sections — land acquisition and park improvements. Each will be voted on separately by residents.

INCLUDED IN the project are development of 14 park and park school sites, Spring Valley land acquisition, maintenance garage, enclosure for Atcher Pool, Olympic-sized pool to be built at Meineke Park, tennis courts, lighted recreation fields and an outdoor hockey rink.

Development at the park sites will range from extensive landscaping and installation of playground apparatus to recreation field construction.

Improvements at park-school sites will be made at Collins, Churchill, Hoover, Einstein and Aldrin. Parks to be improved will be Timbercrest, Webster-Warwick, Campanelli, Civic, Shapiro, Sheffield Park West, Meineke, Atcher and one at Cedarcrest and Seneca drives.

The average yearly cost to the average taxpayer for the first five years has been estimated to be about $13. The costs are expected to drop after five years. The bonds are expected to be paid off in about 15 years.

The breakdown on the park improvements costs is:

- All park construction, $716,000.
- All lighting construction $154,000.
- Meineke Park pool, $600,000.

- Atcher Pool enclosure, $80,000.
- New maintenance garage and equipment, $250,000.

About $700,000 has been estimated as needed to purchase land east of Plum Grove Road for a nature center. The size of the land and the exact location have not been revealed because land negotiations are still under way.

Environment plan outlined

"You can get headlines from mosquito abatement problems and glass recycling, but the real contribution comes in what is going to be around a long time — the things important in the total community picture."

Those were the remarks made by Schaumburg Mayor Robert O. Atcher to members of a newly created environmental committee which met for the first time last week.

Atcher outlined an initial plan of work for the committee. It includes developing air pollution standards for Schaumburg's industrial parks, education of developers in maintaining natural bogs and wetlands and creating ecological areas to help develop students' ecological awareness, and assisting in planning and development of the Spring Valley Nature Center.

John O'Hara, who holds a Ph.D. in ecology, was selected chairman of the committee; Lorraine Olsen is vice chairman.

Norman Dotti and Garry Crawford were assigned to the industrial parks project; Al Larson and Mrs. Olsen will work on the Spring Valley project, and Andrew Poczos and Christine Timmons will be involved in the bogs and wetlands study.

Dotti, Crawford and Larson were members of the Clean Environment Committee, a voluntary citizens group which functioned for two years in Schaumburg.

Committee members will meet Oct. 4 for a presentation by Larson on Spring Valley. Other presentations are scheduled for Oct. 18 and 25.

The committee will function under the auspices of the village department of environmental health.

High Court rules against parochialism

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $3 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

It is becoming increasingly apparent that Schaumburg Twp. Elementary School Dist. 54 does everything possible to keep its teachers on their toes. Getting down to the bottom of things, school officials recently purchased chairs and other movable equipment for the new Hoover School, now under construction on N. Springinguh Road.

Prices are wide in range but the chairs are relatively inexpensive. A teacher may be able to sit on a $14 chair while a school secretary can rest on one costing $44. A throne for the Hoover principal, described as the living end, will cost close to $50.

Current district philosophy appears to reflect the idea that teachers must do most of their thinking on their feet.

TO TAPE OR not to tape... that is the question today in the elementary school district and township government as well.

The Dist. 54 board has solved its dilemma handsomely. All school board meetings are taped from beginning to end. As well, Betty Helsper, board clerk, records all board dialogue and action plus audience commentary in shorthand notes.

A recent tape check indicated that audience comment is not always completely audible which prompted a board decision to purchase a new tape system equipped with a centrally located microphone.

On the other hand, Schaumburg Township Board of Auditors must subscribe to a different philosophy toward recording their meetings.

Township Clerk Kay Wojcik uses small portable taping equipment which is frequently disconnected at her discretion during auditors meetings. Mrs. Wojcik takes no hand notes and observers are beginning to wonder if she is assisted by a phantom with a computerized memory.

Other speculation indicates some of the auditors discourse and deliberation are better left unrecorded for posterity.

Thieves were apparently frustrated in an attempt to break into three Town Square Shopping Center stores Sunday in Schaumburg.

An employee of The Spot, a hot dog restaurant, discovered at 4:20 p.m. that a rear door lock had been pried open. Police said entry had not been gained because of an inside door lock.

About 1½ hours later a Schaumburg policeman discovered attempted entries at the Anna Marie Dance Studio and Fentons.

In each incident, pry marks were found on the rear door. Nothing has been reported missing.

Lightning strikes International Village

Lightning was the apparent cause of a fire early Saturday on the roof of an apartment building at International Village, Meacham and Algonquin roads in Schaumburg, authorities said.

Damage to the roof was estimated at $1,000, Chief Lloyd Abrahamson said. No injuries were reported.

Boat engine stolen while family dines

The hot dog restaurant is at Higgins and Plum Grove roads, Schaumburg.

'I knew I had done nothing wrong'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $400,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.

About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 466 shares of stock in the bank between 1969 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Fifeleski.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional District Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Fulle criticized yesterday his county board colleagues for failure to reform county bank deposit practices. Within days of the original charges, Fulle submitted an ordinance to require annual review of bank depositories, report quarterly deposit totals and interest, deny accounts having county officials as stockholders or officials and request a legal opinion "whether the board has the constitutional authority to direct the treasurer to invest (county) funds."

"That resolution still is in the finance committee," Fulle said.

Carey said he will recommend a change in state statute governing deposit of county funds. Carey's proposal would require reporting to the board of county accounts by the treasurer and would require county officers "to divest themselves of stock in such banks immediately upon taking office."

THE CAREY investigation, headed by Thomas McDonough of the financial crimes unit, found that the commissioners held "minor (bank) interests. Under the present law, it would be necessary to prove that a profit was received because of the deposit of city funds. Such profit would be minimal and hardly persuasive in establishing a willful violation of the law," Carey said.

Dunne held 100 shares of Amalgamated Bank and Trust Co. stock and 300 shares of Metropolitan Trust and Savings Bank stock. He approved both banks as depositories.

"The records do not show that Fulle ever voted on designating the Parkway Bank for deposits," Carey said. Fulle is a former director of the bank.

Bank held 750 shares in Metropolitan Trust and 50 in Amalgamated and Stroger purchased 300 shares in Gateway National Bank.

School lunch price to go up 5 cents Nov. 1

The price of hot lunches in Schaumburg Township School Dist. 54 Schools will be increased five cents beginning Nov. 1.

Supt. Wayne Schaible has told board members the district could anticipate a $19,000 deficit if the price was not raised.

Increased food costs and the loss of a milk subsidy is responsible for the raise, administrators added.

They plan to write a letter to President Nixon expressing "dismay" about milk and food subsidy cuts.

Student lunches will be 55 cents and adults will be charged 60 cents. Milk will go up a penny per half-pint.

In other action the board last week decided an existing contract prohibits it from adding Anne Fox School to a trial lunch program.

THE ACTION to consider Fox as one of the trial schools where a hot lunch would be served during a half-hour period was to be voted on last week.

However, the board decided to drop the matter when Rosemary Sells, who directs a parent-paid sack lunch program in many of the district's schools, reminded the board she had a contract to do so for the 1973-74 school year.

"I do not wish to renegotiate the contract," she said.

Mrs. Sells has a contract to operate in 17 of the district's schools. When the district decided to conduct a lunch study with different types of lunch and time periods, four schools were withdrawn from Mrs. Sells' direction. Original studies proposed Fox School be used in the trial program and hot lunches be served there during a half-hour period instead of the hour-long lunch now held.

Several teachers at Thursday's meeting, who said they spoke for all the teachers at Fox, said "the shortened period was bad for the children and didn't allow them enough time to eat or to let off steam."

He's busy learning area's health needs

Hospital chief lacks hospital

by STIRLING MORITA

Henry J. Buhrman is a hospital administrator without a hospital.

But that doesn't mean he hasn't been busy.

Buhrman was selected nearly a year ago as the administrator for the planned Schaumburg branch of Rush-Presbyterian-St. Luke's Medical Center, Chicago. Although construction for the 100-bed facility has been scheduled to begin in early 1975, Buhrman, 39, has found the job "challenging and exciting."

He said his appointment was made as early as possible so he could relate to the community's health needs.

Buhrman, 1616 Seaton Ln., Schaumburg, said, "The medical center wanted to be aware of community needs and be in a position to become involved in the community."

BUHRMAN IS the first one to admit he has been a public relations man for the hospital, but quickly adds that he has been deeply involved in the planning that goes on before construction ground is even broken.

"It would probably be inappropriate to define my work week in terms of number of hours," Buhrman said. "I don't know how many hours I put in a week. I don't stop thinking about the hospital at the end of the work day."

He added that his job was a 24-hour-a-day involvement.

Buhrman spends his time equally between his office at the downtown medical center and his regional office at 16 E. Schaumburg Rd.

The proposed branch facility is part of a trend in health-care planning. The facility, while being a full service, community hospital to meet the needs of the area, will also be linked to the prestigious downtown hospital in terms of shared ancillary services and educational processes for interns, residents and nurses.

HENRY BUHRMAN

Expensive and sophisticated medical operations that will not be economically feasible for this area will be offered at the downtown facility.

BUHRMAN SPENDS some of his nights talking to civic groups, establishing RPSSL's reputation in the community. He keeps close connections with the service league for the proposed hospital and assists in fund-raising activities.

RPSSL has pledged to throw in $2 for every $1 put up by the community for the $12 million estimated for construction.

"I have tried to explain what RPSSL will be, and how it relates to the community and the medical center," Buhrman said.

Buhrman has been busy working with the medical center's architects and planning staff to put together a narrative description of the functions of the hospital. "I have been defining demographic data, refining it to community illnesses and translating into services."

Preparation for the hospital's extensive application for a preliminary operating permit was made by Buhrman. He will also compile manpower studies for administration at the planned facility. Buhrman has also been closely coordinating with Dr. Robert E. Reynolds about the recruiting of a medical staff.

BUDGETING WILL also be a part of Buhrman's lengthy list of tasks.

"I have been very warmly received in the community," the youthful administrator said. "People in the community are very interested in what goes on and are very willing to contribute to their own energies in helping the community."

He termed the development of the RPSSL branch system as being unique.

"It's terribly exciting as a health-care administrator to be involved in such a unique program," Buhrman added.

Buhrman had been involved in budgetary functions with Rush Medical College, Chicago, when he served as an assistant to the dean of the college.

Buhrman served as an administrative resident when he first joined the hospital in September 1969. He later became administrative assistant for in-patient care services before assuming the medical college position.

Plan for low, moderate-income housing, suburbs urged

by KAREN BLECHIA
The Northwest suburbs will need 18,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 18,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non-working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Federal mediation brought in

Drivers' wildcat strike means no garbage service

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 705 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbage men back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "bickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $3.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Homeowners are being discouraged from keeping garbage at curbside for sanitary reasons during the duration of the strike.

Open space tax break recommended

A tax break for the owners of airports, golf courses and other privately-owned, publicly-used facilities was supported by many local state legislators at last night's Prospect Heights Improvement Association (PHIA) meeting.

The PHIA has proposed a reduction in taxes of these properties by lowering their assessed valuation. The PHIA feels that such a tax break would help keep such properties operating.

Those favoring such laws were state

Rep. John E. Porter, R-Evanston; State Rep. Robert S. Juckett, R-Park Ridge, and State Sen. John J. Nimrod, R-4th.

"We have lost a great deal of open land," Nimrod said, adding such laws should have been passed many years ago.

Juckett said the laws should be patterned after a recent law designed to keep farm land from being sold out for developments. That law, he said, gives a tax reduction until the land is sold for development. Then when the land is sold, a full tax assessment is charged and is applied for the three previous years.

AN ALTERNATE to the tax break was proposed by Francine Stein, representing State Rep. Aaron Jaffe, D-Skokie. She said Jaffe believes local governmental bodies should condemn such large properties for public use, rather than giving their owners tax breaks. "The small homeowner has much more clout than he thinks," she said.

Of concern to Prospect Heights residents are the fates of Pal-Waukee Airport and the Rob Roy Golf Course. A petition for apartment zoning on the golf course is currently before Mount Prospect officials. Prospect Heights residents want the golf course kept as open space.

The meeting with state officials was called by the PHIA to discuss possible legislative action that might help unincorporated areas such as Prospect Heights. Several other areas were also discussed, including the establishment of a state land use commission, creation of a regional transportation authority and the empowering of townships with zoning and land use approval and the ability to condemn property for public use.

Also present, though arriving after the discussion of possible tax breaks, were State Sen. Bradley M. Glass, R-1st; State Rep. Eugene F. Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights; and State Rep. Brian Duff, R-Willmette.

High Court rules against parochialism

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $3 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

Board to discuss drainage problem

The Dist. 23 Board of Education tomorrow night is scheduled to discuss a proposed Wheeling condominium development that could worsen drainage problems at John Muir School.

The meeting is scheduled for 7:30 at the administration building, 700 N. Schoenbeck Rd.

School Dist. 23 and developers of Pleasant Run condominiums on Elmhurst Road near Muir School have been fighting over stormwater drainage for nearly two years.

Stormwater from Pleasant Run flows onto the Muir School site on Drake Terrace, causing ponding that school officials say is a hazard to children.

Developers of The Forums, a proposed 150-unit condominium project just west of Pleasant Run, are planning to connect their drainage system with the Pleasant Run storm sewer. This would mean stormwater from both developments would empty into the school site.

The Dist. 23 school board is to discuss plans for The Forums tonight with developer Victor Smigel, Assistant Supt. Tom Rich has said he expects the drainage problem to be a major consideration in negotiations with Smigel for donations to the school district.

The Wheeling Plan Commission has approved preliminary plans for the project. They must now go to the village board before the final plans will be considered.

Maryville decision expected tonight

A decision is expected tonight by the Dist. 28 School Board on the site for the new Maryville School.

The board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8 o'clock at River Trails Junior High School, 1000 Wolf Rd., Mount Prospect.

The citizen's committee formed to study possible sites for the school will make its recommendation to the school board at the meeting.

Lloyd Demel, school board president, last week said the board plans to make a final decision on the site tonight. Several weeks ago the board voted to build the school for the Maryville children, who are wards of the state, on the River Trails Junior High School site.

But residents of the district were unhappy with that plan and prompted the creation of the citizen's committee to study alternative locations.

Demel had indicated the school board may reverse its earlier decision after considering the citizens' committee recommendation.

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bank "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $400,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.

About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 4777 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 466 shares of stock in the bank between 1968 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 26, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Fittelski.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional District Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

Happy birthday to Lena (Mrs. Walter) Mueller, of 17 S. Owen St., now 75 years old. All five of her children were able to be with her to mark the occasion, coming from California and Florida, as well as from Prospect Heights and Mount Prospect. She is a grandmother to 11 youngsters and a great-grandmother of one (with another great grandchild on the way).

Lena remembers well 1921, 52 years ago, when she and her husband built the house where she still lives. "It was the first house on the east side of town," she said. "We had a cistern pump and a well for water."

When called to ask about the birthday, Lena asked, "What paper are you from?" Learning it was The Herald, she was glad and said, "I remember when H. C. Paddock, the man who started the Paddock papers, used to come riding on horseback over to our place. We used to invite him in to sit for a while."

Lena Mueller is quite a lady. Happy, happy birthday!

Happy 25th wedding anniversary to Warren and Dorothy Dahlstrom of 1221 W. Sunset. Happy 50th wedding anniversary to Ernst and Hulda Kreeker of 307 S. Edward.

BEST OF LUCK to Bob Hennig who leaves in a couple of weeks for two years with the Peace Corps in the Philippine Islands.

Rev. John P. Weinback, who served as vicar at St. Paul Lutheran Church, 1962-63, is running as an independent candidate for city sheriff in Virginia Beach, Va.

LOCAL CAMP Fire Girls are at it again — being busy, busy, busy. A week ago, the organization had its annual Fly-Up Ceremony when fourth grade girls "flew" from Blue Bird to Adventure level. Fly-up groups are under the leadership of Sherry Boemmel, Carol Doyle, Veronica Foloky, Marlys Long, Arline Moss, Irma Nelson, Donna Pedersen, Florence Smith and Charlene Tokar.

Also, last week was the annual Blue Bird picnic. Discovery Club girls who helped with games and songs were Tammy Aerts, Margaret Barton, Christy Borris, Laurie Campbell, Linda Hunsinger, Nancy Page, Marion Palritz, Carla Piscopo, Leigh Vandeven, Karl Voegel, Suzanne Gobeille, Lisa Wood, Susan Santostefano.

Long-range CFG plans for the year include service projects like recycling glass bottles and newspapers, saving canceled stamps for Tubifin to benefit disabled in Norway, sending greeting cards to pen pals at Dixon, sewing items for Hines and Cook County hospitals, entertaining shut-ins, beautifying the village, etc. All of these things are, of course, in addition to fun things like camping weekends, hayrides, swim parties, snow sculpting contests, museum trips and carolling.

A 30-year-old Schaumburg man was arrested Friday by Mount Prospect police on a charge of public indecency.

David J. Maga, of 16 S. Waban Court, was arrested one week after he pleaded guilty to an earlier charge of public indecency and was placed on two year's probation.

According to police, Maga has been identified by a 16-year-old village girl as the driver of a car who stopped her last Tuesday and asked for directions. This was at 10:10 p.m. at the intersection of William Street and Busse Avenue.

Maga is due to appear Oct. 26 in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

The Rev. Mr. Holly to take new post

The Rev. Raymond L. Holly, curate of St. John's Episcopal Church in Mount Prospect, has announced his resignation, effective Nov. 15.

The Rev. Mr. Holly will become vicar of St. Mark's Episcopal Church in West Frankfort.

He is president of the Prospect Area Ministerial Association, which he formerly served as vice president and secretary-treasurer.

He joined the St. John's clerical staff in January of 1968, and has worked to train lay readers and to conduct study groups.

Fire prevention contest to close

Deadline for entering this year's Mount Prospect Fire Department's Fire Prevention Week poster and window contest is Friday. The theme for the contest is "Everything Burns — Even you."

Trophies and awards will be given in each grade category, kindergarten through eighth grade, with overall awards going to the schools. Students in junior high and high schools may enter the window painting contest.

Fire Prevention Week is Saturday through Oct. 13. Further information on the contests is available by calling Fire-fighter Lonnie Jackson at 392-6000.

Attic sale slated at Baptist Church

An attic sale will be held this week at South Community Baptist Church in Mount Prospect.

Antiques, furniture, games, costumes and appliances will be among the items available. The sale will begin at noon Thursday at the church, 501 S. Emerson St., and continue until dark. The sale also will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday.

Man dies: suicide?

An 86-year-old Mount Prospect man died Friday, apparently the victim of a successful suicide attempt.

Police said Gunder Gunderson, 319 N. Eastwood Ave., was found in his bedroom. Police said he apparently hanged himself.

According to police, Gunderson had been in poor health. The body was found at 11:09 p.m. and taken to Northwest Community Hospital.

Apartment complex approval expected

Developer of the 15.5-acre parcel is William Alter.

Tonight's board meeting is scheduled to begin at 8:30 in village hall, rather than the usual 8 p.m. starting time. An executive session meeting on possible acquisition of some or all of the Rob Roy Golf Course property will precede the board meeting.

his political beliefs, but they were mostly ideas, not actions," Hathaway said. He added it is possible the military leaders of Chile might think Teruggi is a sympathizer to the ousted Allende supporters.

Hathaway said that after he was released on Sept. 26, he made an effort to check with friends to see if they had heard from Teruggi, but to no avail.

"All of the Americans who were being held agreed to contact the American consulate as soon as we were released," Hathaway reported. U.S. officials said Teruggi has never reported there. Other inquiries have failed to locate him.

HATHAWAY said he feels the changes are "very remote" that Teruggi was released and is in hiding. He said if Teruggi had been released, he would have left the country and contacted his parents.

Teruggi's parents also spoke to Hathaway yesterday. The young man's father, Franks told The Herald that his concern for his son's condition is increasing daily.

PTA notes

The first general meeting of the Busse School PTA will be at 8 p.m. Thursday in the school's multipurpose room, 101 N. Owen St., Mount Prospect.

Principal Robert Ferguson will introduce new teachers at Busse School, including Linda Engol, Roger Pedersen, Fred Smith and Marleen Lipschultz. Dist. 57 Supt. Earl Sutter will be the guest speaker.

Judy Zach will present a slide show on the functions of the school's resource center.

Park fall, winter classes fill up fast

Many of the Prospect Heights Park District's fall and winter programs are filling up fast, according to Ron Greenberg, director. Registrations are still being accepted at the park office, 4 N. Elmhurst Rd., for the remaining places.

Those with almost-filled registrations include tumbling and trampolining, decoupage, yoga, aerobics, guitar instruction, holiday boutique and children's holiday boutique. He also said ballet and tap, with its new program supervisor this year, is filling up fast.

More boys are needed to sign up for floor hockey and wrestling, he said. In the men's basketball league, he said two teams have signed up and only two more are needed.

Greenberg also said the starting date for decoupage classes has been switched from Oct. 16 to Nov. 20.

Bond forfeiture warrant issued

A Minnesota woman failed for the fourth time Friday to appear in Mount Prospect branch of Cook County Circuit Court.

Police said a $25,000 bond forfeiture warrant was issued for Nancy Jensen, 33. She has been charged in the July, 1972 credit card and purse theft at the Mount Prospect-Holiday Inn. Miss Jensen was last found living in Evanston.

Her new court date is Oct. 26. Miss Jensen allegedly used the stolen credit cards at hotels and gas stations in a three-state area.

Friend thinks Chile holding area man

by STEVE BROWN

"It is all a mystery to me. I still believe that Frank has not been released." The words were those of David Hathaway, a Seattle man who for more than a year has been the roommate of Frank R. Teruggi Jr. of Des Plaines.

In his first interview with an American paper after arriving back in the U.S., Hathaway told The Herald that he doubts

Teruggi had been released by Chilean military officials.

"I LAST SAW Frank on Sept. 21 at the soccer stadium in Santiago. The government said they had released him on that day, but that was not the way the military was doing things," Hathaway said.

In a telephone interview from New York, Hathaway said he had been treated fairly well, but had lost more than 20 pounds while held in captivity. He said the food mostly consisted of some type of stew.

"The food improved a great deal, when the International Red Cross arrived," he added.

Officially the U.S. State Department said yesterday that they "just did not know anything" about Teruggi. Last week, the government said that Teruggi, a 23-year-old economics student, was still being held, but later said that he had been released and listed him as "missing." Now the state department has withdrawn that report.

Hathaway said that while Teruggi was not involved in any political groups in Santiago, he did have "informal contacts with Marxist student groups."

A MILITARY junta overthrew President Salvador Allende on Sept. 11. Teruggi last called his parents on Sept. 17 and told them that he was safe and planned to leave Chile.

"Frank never made any bones about

Results of survey now being analyzed

Mount Prospect School Dist. 57 questionnaires, sent out last March to gauge citizen opinion of the schools, have finally been tabulated.

The results of the 44-question survey are being analyzed by the district's administration prior to release to the school board and the public. At least 1,000 of the more than 6,000 questionnaires mailed out were returned to the district.

Called "Your Opinion Please," the questionnaire asked district residents their opinions on school board credibility, finances and curriculum. There was also room for residents to indicate which school they felt was doing the best educational job.

Moderate-income housing urged for suburbs

by KAREN BLECHA

The Northwest suburbs will need 16,300 additional low- and moderate-income housing units over the next 10 years and 800 of them should at least be in the planning stage in the next year, members of the Regional Housing Coalition said yesterday.

The coalition released a voluntary plan urging balanced distribution of low and moderate-income housing throughout Cook, DuPage, Lake, Kane, Will and McHenry counties. The coalition has set 10,000 subsidized housing units as a first-year goal for the six-county area.

The plan was drafted by the coalition's 12-member mayor steering committee including village presidents Robert Tel-

chert of Mount Prospect, Jack Walsh of Arlington Heights and former Elk Grove Village Pres. Jack Pahl.

The coalition was formed two years ago by the Leadership Council for Metropolitan Open Communities and the Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission (NIPC) to find an alternative to court-ordered distribution of low and moderate-income housing in the suburbs.

"The plan has been developed after extensive discussions with elected public officials and with citizen, civic and business leaders," said Pahl, a NIPC commissioner. "The plan is voluntary. We have no plans for using a stick. We're talking about cooperation among local communities."

According to NIPC statistics and 1970 Census data, 167,000 units are needed to relieve a current housing shortage and 61,800 more would be required to meet the 10-year need. Pahl said it is hoped that each year the coalition's goal would be increased so that the need will be met. He said the units could be either newly constructed or existing units made affordable to low and moderate-income people.

THE 10,000 UNITS as well as the total ten-year need have been allotted among counties by sector. Cook County has been divided into six sectors and the other five counties each represent one sector. In Cook County, Chicago is a single sector and the suburban area has been divided geographically into north, northwest, south, southwest and west sectors.

The northwest sector includes Arlington Heights, Barrington, Buffalo Grove, Des Plaines, Elk Grove Village, Hanover Park, Hoffman Estates, Mount Prospect, Palatine, Park Ridge, Rolling Meadows, Schaumburg, Streamwood and Wheeling.

"The Northeastern Illinois Planning Commission has measured the housing needs of people who live and work in each sector of the region. It has found that much of the need is in the suburbs," Pahl said. "This need involves elderly people living on pensions or Social Security, young people just starting to raise families and those whose jobs are essential to the health and prosperity of every community. We want to open up the metropolitan area as one market so people can decide where they want to reside."

Percentages as well as number of units have been allocated to each sector, but no sites are specified. In the northwest sector, the 800 units represent eight per cent of the 10,000 recommended units, the fourth highest percentage in Cook County. Chicago, west, and north Cook County and DuPage County have been allocated more units than the Northwest suburbs.

The housing is needed in the suburbs, Pahl said, because jobs have increased by 500,000 since the 60's but the housing hasn't been built for people who fill those jobs. According to 1970 census figures, about 20 per cent of low and moderate-income housing is in the suburbs while 42 per cent of the jobs are in the suburbs.

Of the 16,300 units needed in the Northwest suburbs over the next 10 years, 14,500 are for families and 3,800 are for elderly who have been living in the area but can no longer afford it, the coalition said.

THE 14,500 families include non working families on public assistance who live in the area and households whose principal wage earner is employed in the sector but cannot afford to live there. Pahl said this would include some postmen, municipal employees, bank tellers, key-punch operators, firemen, policemen, (continued on page 2)

Federal mediation brought in

Drivers' wildcat strike means no garbage service

Bags and cans of garbage — hundreds of pounds of it — remained stacked outside Northwest suburban homes yesterday as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc. staged a wildcat strike over a salary dispute.

A federal mediator was called in yesterday as negotiations continued into the night in an effort to settle the walkout, which began when the drivers' contract with the Barrington scavenger service expired at 12:01 a.m. Monday.

The numerous communities served by Browning-Ferris, including Hoffman Estates, Inverness, Mount Prospect, Palatine and parts of Prospect Heights and Schaumburg, were without refuse pickup yesterday.

LOCAL OFFICIALS were adopting a "wait and see" stance. A Herald survey showed that none of the municipalities served by Browning-Ferris planned any immediate scavenger alternative, but most officials indicated that if the strike were prolonged, they would explore other means of emergency garbage pickup.

Frank Grady, business representative of Local 703 of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters, which represents the 75 Browning-Ferris drivers, described the union and company as "very far apart" in the contract talks. He expressed hope, however, that a settlement could be reached soon.

Grady also said efforts will be made to get the garbagemen back on the job while the negotiations continue.

The walkout was not authorized by the union. "As long as we're still negotiating," Grady said, "they should never have walked off the job. If the talks had broken down, that would be a different situation."

HE CHARACTERIZED the contract talks as "bickering back and forth," and indicated that Browning-Ferris, formerly known as the Barrington Trucking Co., could "easily" meet the drivers' demands.

David Paige, general manager of Browning-Ferris, refused to comment on the strike or negotiations. Peter Vanderveld, president of the firm, released a brief statement late yesterday afternoon calling for a "fair and equitable agreement."

The main demand of the drivers is higher wages. They are now paid $5.05 an hour, and were seeking an additional $1 an hour when contract talks began two months ago.

The drivers' request has been lessened slightly, Grady indicated, but the firm has offered "not much" in return, he said.

Other contract points being negotiated involve working conditions, pension and health and welfare benefits.

The talks were taking place in the Elmhurst office of the Chicago and Suburban Refuse Disposal Association, which is representing Browning-Ferris. About five negotiators were present from each side, plus the one federal mediator.

NO PICKETING was reported yesterday at the Barrington headquarters of Browning-Ferris.

Meanwhile, residents were urged by local health departments to keep refuse inside until the strike is settled. When service is resumed, the regular Monday pickup schedule will be followed.

The six Northwest suburbs served by Browning-Ferris are under separate contracts with a wide disparity in scavenger rates.

A contract settlement which results in higher operating costs for the company can be expected to be passed on to the scavenger customers.

The last wildcat strike by garbagemen at the Barrington company was in 1969 and lasted two days. It too involved a contract dispute over wages.

Laseke drivers still working

Drivers for the Laseke Disposal Co., Arlington Heights, were on the job yesterday and a company foreman said he did not expect them to join the wildcat strike called by employees of Barrington Trucking.

"I tentatively don't anticipate my men going out," said Al Broder, Laseke foreman, but he added that there was a possibility of the strike spreading to other scavenger companies.

Broder said men from Barrington Trucking, a division of Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois, were talking to Laseke drivers yesterday trying to convince them to join the day-old strike.

The walk out by Browning-Ferris employees is not sanctioned by the union, Teamsters Local 703.

Normally, wage increases arrived at after the expiration of the contract Oct. 1 are made retroactive to that date. The union bargains with representatives of an association of Chicago and suburban scavenger companies.

Wage agreements then apply to all companies that use Teamster Union members.

The Laseke Disposal Co. is in the midst of competitive negotiations with the Village of Arlington Heights over a five-year extension of its exclusive contract.

Two other companies are currently involved in the village contract talks, SCA Services, Inc. and Browning-Ferris.

SCA has proposed a residential rate of $5.10 per month per residential customer for a continuation of backdoor pickup twice weekly. Browning-Ferris has not submitted its price, but is expected to do so at a meeting of the village board finance committee tonight.

Laseke representatives tonight are expected to lower their proposed price of $6.13 per month, which includes a 50-cent village subsidy.

GRASS CLIPPINGS, bicycle tires and ordinary garbage scavenger services, went out on a wildcat strike. Home-put out for pickup yesterday morning were all still there at day's end as drivers from Browning-Ferris Industries of Illinois Inc., one of the Northwest suburbs' largest

Fulle exonerated in 'conflict'

by AL MESSERSCHMIDT

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines and three other Cook County Board members were exonerated Monday from conflict of interest bank stock ownership.

Cook County State's Atty. Bernard Carey announced that Fulle, County Board Pres. George Dunne, Comr. John Stroger and Comr. Charles Bonk "are not prosecutable under the law" for ownership of stock in banks where county funds were deposited.

"I'm delighted," Fulle told The Herald during an interview in his county board office. "I knew I had done nothing wrong. I had not misused my office. I had no personal gain. This is what I have been saying for 18 months."

THE BOARD members were named March 3, 1972 in a Better Government Association and Chicago newspaper investigation that claimed county loss of $400,000 a year through deposit of funds in non-interest bank accounts. The BGA claimed that $13.4 million was distributed to banks with political influence.

About $400,000 was in non-interest accounts at Parkway Bank & Trust Co., 477 N. Harlem Ave., Harwood Heights. Fulle owned 466 shares of stock in the bank between 1966 and 1969. He sold the stock Sept. 28, 1972.

"A thorough investigation has been completed," Carey said. "We have made a determination that the charges made in connection with the bank stock holdings are not prosecutable."

IN AN INTERVIEW with The Herald, Carey carefully pointed out a difference between the county board investigation and similar charges filed against Chicago Ald. Thomas Keane and Ald. Edwin Filleski.

The county board "really does not vote to ratify banks as depositories," said the Republican state's attorney. "It's quite the opposite in the city where the city treasurer can only deposit city funds in banks designated by the council."

Fulle said the months since the newspaper story have been a "traumatic experience. All my records — canceled checks, bank records — have been subpoenaed by three different grand juries. I was never called but I volunteered to be a witness."

The bank stock case was originally announced by former State's Atty. Edward Hanrahan while Fulle battled against U. S. Rep. Samuel Young in the 10th Congressional Dist. Republican primary.

Hanrahan, a Democrat, announced bank record subpoenas in the case about a week after losing 1972 election to Carey. The grand jury investigating the case ended as Carey took office.

FULLE WAS named in a renewed Carey probe within days of announcing his candidacy for Cook County GOP chairman. "It's obvious someone doesn't care for me and has the right contacts," Fulle said April 8.

Master plan defended—nursing home rejected

The recently-completed master plan for Arlington Heights Road last night was upheld in the face of two challenges to the zoning pattern recommended in the massive study guide.

The Arlington Heights village board voted to turn down annexation and rezoning of property for a nursing home on the south side of Golf Road a quarter mile east of Arlington Heights Road.

And the trustees held in abeyance plans for a strip shopping center on relocated North Arlington Heights Road, just south of Dundee Road.

The Arlington Heights Road Study, prepared by the village planner and recently adopted by the plan commission, recommends residential development in the area proposed for the four-story nursing home, and research and manufacturing zoning for the north Arlington Heights Road property.

Nine owners of new single-family homes along Seeger Road, south of Golf Road and directly across from the proposed nursing center, appeared to protest plans for the 240-bed facility.

Village trustees apparently took cognizance of what Village Pres. Jack Walsh admitted was the homeowners' special situation. Their homes were built as a buffer to acres of apartment development further south.

Richard Peterson, 307 Seeger Rd., speaking for the homeowners said, "We bought knowing we were a buffer zone... and with the confidence that land (to the north) in the county would come in as single-family to Arlington Heights."

TRUSTEE JAMES T. Ryan said he felt it was unrealistic to expect that the land which fronts on Golf Road east of Arlington Heights Road will ever be developed with single family homes.

Peterson drew a rebuff from Ryan when he suggested the nursing home would bring Blacks and other minority persons from Chicago to the neighborhood as employees.

"That is a ridiculous argument," Ryan said sharply.

The trustees tabled any decision on the proposed shopping center until the Arlington Heights Road Study and a second economic study now being completed by an outside consultant can be evaluated.

The economic study, done by Larry Smith and Associates, reports that Arlington Heights now has only 2.5 per cent of its land zoned for research and industry compared to 9.4 per cent for commercial.

The report also reportedly argues against any further extension of strip shopping.

However Jack Whisler, real estate consultant for the project, said that only 80 acres of the 360 acres of industrial-zoned land near the proposed shopping center have been developed over the last four years.

High Court rules against parochial

The Illinois Supreme Court yesterday said the state's parochial plan is unconstitutional.

The action strikes down three bills passed by the Illinois General Assembly in 1972 which would have provided $30 million a year to the state's non-public schools. Chief sponsor of all three bills was State Rep. Eugene Schlickman (R-Arlington Heights).

In its 7-2 ruling, the court directly overruled measures to provide $4.5 million grants to low-income families and $20.5 for textbooks and "auxiliary services" such as counseling in non-public schools.

The court also indirectly struck down a provision to provide $5 million for cooperative education programs between private and public schools. The court overturned a lower court ruling which said the program was constitutional, but also said, "It is neither feasible nor appropriate to attempt at this time, in the absence of any effort at implementation, to determine the validity of the multitudinous activities authorized by the act."

A lower court had said the innovative education provision and the one providing textbooks and other services were constitutional. The lower court had also said the grants for low-income families was unconstitutional.

State Rep. Eugene Schlickman, R-Arlington Heights, and chief architect of the plan, said "flies in the face" of a 1968 U.S. Supreme Court ruling. In that case, the court specifically held that textbook repayments to private school parents are proper.

BUT SCHLICKMAN said he is planning no appeal and doesn't expect to introduce any more legislation on the subject. "If this isn't constitutional, I don't know what is," he said. He said he hopes someone appeals the case so we get a final decision.

A lot of work goes into those high school half-time shows

by BETTY LEE

There's always something that arouses your spirit for a good high school football game when the band comes out in its glitter and shine.

Maybe it's the heavy beat of the drums or the blaring trumpets. Or maybe it's the members marching in precision or the pretty smile of a majorette tossing her baton in the air.

Whatever it may be, hundreds of high school students this fall are working many hours to put on performances before the game and during half-time. The smiling faces and precision marching represent those hours.

The 60-member marching band at Hershey High School practices 10 hours a week, regularly, with an additional five hours before and after school on the weeks it puts on a half-time show.

DECKED OUT IN dark brown uniforms with orange-and-white trim, members play music from blues to songs of Burt Bacharach. Last week, the theme was "A Salute to the Blues." Members played Rhapsody in Blue, Beyond the Blue Horizon and blues music.

However, 30 girls can take the spotlight away from the band when they appeared on the field. The Orchestis, a girls' dance group perform in bright yellow and brown sequined costumes to the music of the band. When the Orchestis don't perform, members of the Pomberets, a girls' drill and pom-pom squad take over.

At Arlington High School, members of the marching band practice daily and on Thursday nights before the game. On Tuesday nights there are voluntary practice sessions. Majorettes march with the band and feature a baton twirling show.

U.S. subpoenas Wheeling Village records

by LYNN ASINOF

Wheeling Village Board records for the past five years have been subpoenaed by a federal grand jury investigating alleged building and zoning shakedowns in that village yesterday.

A Herald reporter was present Friday when a federal agent arrived at the Wheeling Village Hall to serve the subpoena on Village Mgr. George Passolt.

It was learned yesterday that the document served on the village manager was a subpoena for board records. Passolt refused to comment, noting that grand jury proceedings are secret.

Other village officials contacted yesterday also declined to comment on the subpoena or even confirm that board records had been subpoenaed. "If there's any announcement of that magnitude, I think it should come from the village manager," said Trustee John Koopen.

Only Village Pres. Ted C. Scanlon said specifically that he knew nothing about the subpoenaed records. He said he knew village building and zoning records had been subpoenaed earlier this year, but said he had not been informed of the new subpoena.

Likewise, federal officials connected with the investigation said they could make no comment on the matter.

THE VILLAGE BOARD records are the latest documents to be subpoenaed by the federal grand jury. Early this summer, several cartons of village building and zoning records were turned over to the grand jury, which has been hearing testimony for several months.

The investigation by U.S. Atty. James Thompson's office is focused on reports of payoffs by developers to obtain village approval of such things as annexation, zoning, subdivision plans and water and sewer lines.

Targets of the federal grand jury probe include certain present or former village officials as well as others suspected of violating the Hobbs Act by using extortion and bribery to interfere with interstate commerce.

The Wheeling case is also expected to make use of a large number of witnesses, many of them developers of major Wheeling projects built in the past five years. Some of these developers, subpoenaed by the grand jury, have been granted immunity from prosecution in exchange for their testimony.

ONE SOURCE close to the grand jury proceedings indicated to the Herald yesterday that at least one aspect of the federal inquiry is the manner in which elections are conducted. Witnesses before the grand jury were asked how elections are run in Wheeling, how candidates are selected and what causes individuals to either seek public office or, once elected, to remain in public office.

Although government inquiry into election procedures in Wheeling was not considered the purpose of the original investigation, illegal election practices would be legitimate grounds for federal agents to pursue. Violations of election law could also violate federal statutes.

Ball games planned for Recreation Park

Tennis, basketball and volleyball are on tap for adults at Recreation Park, 500 E. Miner, Arlington Heights.

Monday nights from 7 until 9 will be set aside for all adults to play volleyball. There is no fee and teams change members after each game.

Men's basketball will begin Wednesday night. There are no fees or registration for the pick-up games. Recreation Park provides the basketballs.

Assessor plans office on NW Highway

Cook County Assessor P. J. Cullerton will open a satellite office this month at 1612 W. Northwest Hwy., Arlington Heights.

The Cook County Board Monday approved leasing of 800 square feet of space in the building for $400 a month. The three-year lease on the building, subleased from Victor Zurita, begins Oct. 15.

The location is the third proposed by Cullerton since August. When a lease for space at 664 E. Northwest Hwy. in Palatine was withdrawn by the building owner, the assessor announced in August a tentative agreement for $385 a month space at 11 E. Miner, Arlington Heights.

Spokesmen for Cullerton were unavailable for comment Monday and did not attend the board meeting.

Comr. Floyd Fulle of Des Plaines voted against awarding of the lease. County Republicans have opposed attempts by the Democratic assessor to open offices in the suburbs. The Cullerton offices are seen as steps to eliminate need for traditionally Republican township assessors.

CULLERTON OPENED offices in Oak Lawn and Glenview Aug. 15. The board also approved a lease for assessor offices in Hillside.

In other business, two Des Plaines residents were named trustees of the Oak Meadow Sanitary District. Appointed were Floyd W. McMullen, 10075 Potter Rd. and Fred L. Pullman, 10067 Meadow Ln.

More than $1.5 million in road improvements — including repaving in Elk Grove Township — were approved.

Palumbo Excavating Co. was awarded the $57,127.15 repaving contract for Devon Avenue from Busse Road to Elmhurst Road.

The work will include paving of 4,334 feet in two lanes 24 feet wide. The lanes will be divided by a four-foot median. Construction includes curbs and gutters and landscaping and will be financed with motor fuel tax funds.
